Another successful Old Home Days

BY BILL LOCKWOOD

The Vermont Journal

ROCKINGHAM, Vt. As long as most locals can remember, during the first weekend in August, an enthusiastic crowd of thousands has gathered for the Saturday, 9:30 p.m. Rockingham Old Home Days fireworks show in Bellows Falls. It is quite impressive and has been billed through the years as, "The biggest fireworks show in Vermont, and possibly the best in the world." It is always the feature event of the celebration.

This weekend of celebration dates back to an annual religious pilgrimage to the Rockingham Meeting House that began in the early 1800s. The pilgrimage continues today as an event featuring a historical speaker. Other events were slowly added over the years, with the fireworks added for the nation's bicentennial in 1976. The late Lolic Lisai, of Lisai's Market, is credited as an avid fireworks enthusiast who worked with total dedication over the years to raise donations for the display, making it the great spectacle it has become. His son Brent now runs the Local merchant and current Assistant Judge Lamont Barnett has been one of those in charge, in one role or another, of the event for many years. He says the Fireworks Fund has again raised about $20,000, and he predicted "the same great show as always." He fears though that, with inflation and the changing world trade situation, "This will be the last year we'll be able to do the status quo." Over the years, the show organizers have become adept at obtaining surplus fireworks from Fourth of July shows at a discount, and volunteers collect donations from the crowd that usually fund about a quarter of the cost of next year's show. Businesses and others donate the difference. Barnet says, "There are a lot of people out there who are very generous." He says, "You can see people smiling the whole time. You can forget about all your troubles and the troubles of the community for a weekend."

Deborah Collier of the Great Falls Regional Chamber of Commerce was organizer of the other events, most of which took place at the Way Point Center. Many downtown merchants had sales and events as well. The Flat Iron Café opened up their floor for jazz by the Vermont Moonlighters, and PK's Pub hosted the band Intercept, as well as DJ Wade, for a dance party. The day started with a 5K race at the Recreation Center, then karaoke at noon at the Waypoint Center with food trucks, lemonade and popcorn, inflatable rides, a slide, face painting, games, and other activities for the kids. Entertainment continued through the day with concerts by Green Mountain Strummers, Ezra Holloway, and the feature act, The Road Trash Band at 7 p.m.

Larisa Demos, one of the partners at the Flat Iron Cooperative said, "We re-opened the coffee shop just this winter, and it's been great being part of this year's event." During the afternoon, the crowds did not seem as big this year, likely due to the oppressive heat and humidity. Both Mack Farnsworth, there with the Touch a Truck exhibit, and Firefighter Yvonne Martin, helping display Westminster Engine No. 2 and its equipment, said, "The kids are having fun." Later, among the viewers of the fireworks, there were a lot of "Oohs" and "Ahs" from the crowd as well as the usual ovation at the end.

On Sunday afternoon, the 116th annual pilgrimage at the Rockingham Meeting House featured author Bill Mares presenting his book about humor in Vermont.

Chester Selectboard breezes through agenda items

BY KYLE LAURITA-BONOMETTI

The Vermont Journal

CHESTER, Vt. - In a short, 24-minute meeting on Wednesday, Aug. 3, 2022, the Chester Selectboard approved eight agenda items, from authorizing Town Manager Julie Hance to apply for a municipal parking lot grant, to discussing the upcoming retirement of Police Chief Richard Cloud. The selectboard breezed through each item, despite the fact that Board Chair Arne Jonynas was not pres-

The meeting began with an approval of last meeting's minutes, in which the board and Chester resident Sue Bailey noted that there have been a number of distressing bicycle related accidents and incidents in town, such as cyclists speeding through stop signs on their way down High Street. The board agreed to look into the issue for coming meetings and moved on to "Old Business," in which Hance stated that they have received a number of complaints about faded crosswalks. According to Hance, the paint for the crosswalks is a particular, petroleum-based paint that has been on backorder for months. There is no clear indication of when the paint will be available.

Next on the agenda, Hance updated the board on Chief Cloud's retirement. Chief Cloud has submitted his retirement papers and plans to leave the department on Jan. 7, 2023, at the end of the pay year. He will be involved in the process of selecting the next Chief, which will begin mid-August, according to Hance, and will also involve Jim Baker, who is amassing data for the Police Department Assessment.

The Assessment was also on the agenda. There is currently a survey on Facebook and the Town of Chester website, which is, stated Hance, "The last piece of data collection," for the report. The assessment will allegedly be complete by mid-August. Hance stated that it has not vet been decided whether the report will be available to the public, but that if it is, it will be available on the town website.

A motion approving

Hance to apply for a municipal parking lot grant passed unanimously after little discussion. In exchange for listing the public Chester parking lot on the State of Vermont's website, the town will receive allotted grant money from the state for the resurfacing of the parking

In "New Business," the board discussed that they may begin charging drivers to use the electric vehicle charging stations in Chester, something that was previously covered by the town. The State provided Chester with the charging stations three years ago with the understanding that, after three years, Chester could manage them how they wished. Board member Lee Gustafson was in favor of maintaining the stations, saying that he thought "they were a good opportunity to attract ople to town." Finally, the board mentioned that there is still one position available on the Cannabis Control Commission. Anyone seeking to apply for the position can contact the Town on their website, www.chestervt.gov.

Second Planning Commission Community Workshop in Chester —

CHESTER, Vt. - Chester's Planning Commission will host the second in a series of up to four workshops upstairs in Chester's town hall on Monday, Aug. 15, 2022, at 6:30 p.m., as well on Zoom.

As many are aware, our state, including the town of Chester, is currently experiencing a shortage of affordable housing. The purpose of these workshops is to gather citizen's input to assist in broadly updating Chester's Unified Development Bylaws with a focus on implementing steps to help ease the local housing shortage.

Public participation in this process is important in helping to shape and refine our zoning bylaws in ways that will benefit the entire community. This second workshop will center on a presentation by Peter Paggi, the Director of Housing Development at the Windham and Windsor Housing Trust (WWHT). Peter will be discussing potential ways for Chester to better meet its housing needs.

The Windham and Windsor Housing Trust is a nonprofit community land trust and housing development corporation that develops new rental housing in Windham and southern Windsor Counties, as well as providing homeownership services throughout Windham and Windsor Counties. Their experience and track record of successfully developing both multi and single-family housing in southeastern Vermont should provide attendees with ideas and examples to help inform this ongoing

The presentation will explore what the WWHT looks for in implementing construction and/or renovation of a housing development and ways that Chester might be able to work in helping to incentivize additional housing development in town. The discussion should also help inform the ongoing efforts to update Chester's Unified Development Bylaws in ways that assist in enabling village revitaliza-

Chester residents, please plan to attend. Your ideas and feedback are needed as we work to keep Chester a happy, healthy, and functional community. The Zoom link for anyone who prefers to attend remotely is www.us02web.zoom. us/j/81029256359.

Lemonade stand donates to MCNP

LONDONDERRY,

Vt. - Ethan Moore, age 9, and his good friend, Atticus Weikert, age 10, hosted a lemonade stand in the Londonderry Plaza during the Fourth of July parade and donated all proceeds to My Community Nurse Project (MCNP). This local nonprofit agency, staffed by two part-time advanced practice nurses and several dedicated volunteers, provides health care services and advocacy to the residents of the mountain towns. There is never a charge to patients for care. MCNP is funded by generous donations from community members as well as grants from two of the mountain towns, local churches and two private granters.

Ethan and Atticus approached Regina Downer, RN MS, several weeks before the parade, asking to host a lemonade stand for the benefit of MCNP.

Ethan Moore and Atticus Weikert.

Ethan is familiar with the agency because he has seen both Regina and Kathy Shuster RN MS, picking up prescriptions or medically necessary patient-care items at Green Mountain Pharmacy, owned by Ethan's parents. This was Ethan's second time as host of the lemonade stand. He and Atticus doubled their sales this year, with an overall donation of $163.

MCNP board members, staff, and volunteers all give a huge shout out to Ethan and Atticus for their dedication and communityminded activity. MCNP has no overhead expenses, so all proceeds from the lemonade sale will go towards direct services to patients.

Chester's early Fire District, Part II-

By Donald E. Mitchell (Dictated to his daughter, Donna LeClair, July

...A man named Wellman across from present day Gould's Market and left of the library. He was an early photographer in Chester and his home caught fire. The time period was probably late 1940s.

I had the truck parked on the corner of School and Main Streets at the south end of the Green. Clyde Clark, a plumber by trade, who lived on Elm Street in the Depot, was working a portable pump, feeding the water out of the Williams River (at the footbridge) to my truck.

We had a two to twoand-a-half-inch discharge hose line running from the truck down to the Wellman house. When the nozzle was shut off to the hose line, I had to open the gate valve to spill the water that was being fed to the truck I was operating, and I put the water right up onto the porch of the house that is on the corner of School Street and Main Street (the present day Finn and Stone building). You didn't want to stand in front of the gate valve when you opened it. Today this 1931 American LaFrance Rotary Gear Pump still belongs to the Fire Company, and is used for parades.

During this time peind there were two fire districts in the Town of Chester. This created a fire department for each district. The town did not have a fire department in the early years. A group of property owners interested in starting one petitioned the legislature to have a fire district. This would allow the district to raise taxes, to operate a fire department, to buy equipment, and to pay for street lighting and garbage collection if the legal residents of the fire district so desired.

I don't know how many years this went on, but it didn't work out to the satisfaction of some of the people in the Depot area, because they wanted to spend some money and get some equipment, whereas the people in the village were holding back from the Depot residents being able to do this.

The legislature was petitioned again to form a second fire district, which would cover a square mile of area in the Depot section (this section began at the top of Depot Hill, at the former Mackey's Auto Body [present day Chester Auto Body] and First Avenue).

There was a fire hydrant right across the road from there, which we called the "Half-hydrant," because the village paid half the cost of water and the Second Fire District paid the other half. The second Fire District took care of all fires within the township of Chester and billed the town at the end of the year for all services rendered, and the rest of the fires were covered by the Yosemite Engine Company.

At that time there was a little resentment between the two districts. The village didn't want their equipment outside of their fire district. They would answer any fire calls within our district but not in the outlying township.

In fact, in other parts of the country, fire departments and companies had their own territories, and it was not unusual for some to go only as far as their own boundary and not cross the invisible line into another area, even if the fire were just across the line in another district.

The two companies have now banded together into one department and are under the control of the Town of Chester. The principal reason this came about was because of the federal government's practice of giving money away for town improvements. This involved a lot of paperwork that the district could not handle because we were all volunteers, and it would take someone who was a "Philadelphia Lawyer" to complete the paperwork to acquire the money. There was also a problem of keeping enough men together to keep the district going. In the early days of the two districts, the Yosemite Engine Company tried to keep twenty active volunteers in the department. Sometimes it would be a little over that and sometimes a little under. Between the federal paperwork and the need to band together to have enough men, the town got a new truck immediately.

The town might have to contribute something to it it may have been a 90-10% split with 90% being on the part of the federal government and the 10% on the part of Chester. The cost of the truck was fairly reasonable to Chester, if we had to pay anything at all. (There is some question regarding whether we did.)

Back before my time, when the Yosemite Engine Company had the old hand pumper, there were wells at different points around the Depot that were dug and covered. In the event of a fire, a suction hose was put into them to get water for the hand pumper. There was a well on First Avenue; there was one on Elm Street (somewhere across the road from the house Clyde Clark lived in, but a little nearer to the Depot); there was one (I think) in front of Earl Horton's house on the front lawn near the sidewalk. If there were others, I am not aware of them, but I was aware of those. We never used any of them in my time. Probably now, they all have been filled in and passed over. (The former Clark home is to the right of the present day Excel Janitorial, and Earl Horton's house is the big two-story home across the street from present day Lisai's

COMMUNITY NEWS

Dear Editor,

I am announcing my candidacy as an Independent for the Vermont House of Representatives to represent the Windsor-2 district and the towns of Baltimore. Cavendish, and Weathers-

In the past decade, I have served my community in a number of elected positions. I have served as a member of the Cavendish Selectboard, a member of both the Cavendish Town Elementary School board and the Green Mountain Union High School board, a Justice of the Peace, a member of the board of civil authority, and a member and chairperson of Cavendish Fire District 2. I have been an active member of the

Cavendish Volunteer Fire Department for the last six

Vermonters continue to be ravaged by the opioid epidemic. We suffer from a serious labor shortage where over 20,000 working age Vermonters do not participate in the workforce because of addiction, incarceration, and mental health issues. In addition, there is a severe housing shortage for families who want to stay here and work. The Legislature is hostile to small business, or any business for that matter, the public schools do not meet minimum educational standards, and there has been a sharp rise in crimes against people and property. There are solutions to these problems that do not include further taxing Vermonters and creating unaccountable state-funded programs that only worsen the status quo.

I am running to represent the everyday concerns of my fellow citizens, neighbors, friends, and families in Baltimore, Cavendish, and Weathersfield. If elected, I will respect and abide by the Vermont Constitution and defend all your rights and liberty to build the life you desire for yourself and your family.

Sincerely, Stu Lindberg Cavendish, Vt. Dear Editor,

Bring back VPR - The new name "Vermont Public" has fallen flat with listeners, who question, "Vermont Public What?" The explanation from Vermont Public, presented in a flashy information piece is that "Public" is a noun and the subject is "you" meaning all of us. Now, the last time I diagramed a sentence was in middle school, some 48 years ago, but I am pretty sure that my English teacher would have a problem with "noun noun" forming a complete sentence, or even forming a title for that matter.

I am dismayed that Vermont Public's response to its lousy new name is to say it once every minute or two during Morning Edition and All Things Considered. I have been tuning my radio to 89.5 for forty years now. I know 89.5 is Vermont Public Radio, or used to be. I don't need to hear that each spoken sentence on 89.5 has been brought to me by Vermont Public. It is kind of like encouraging people to keep sniffing a corpse flower, because after enough sniffs, it will stop smelling like a corpse and start smelling like dirty old socks. Vermont Public still stinks to me, no matter how many times I hear it. I have actually started to listen to other stations on the radio just to avoid hearing "Vermont Public, Vermont Public, Vermont Public" thirty times an hour. The other stations are really quite good and there is a plethora of them on Sirius

I suppose that if Vermont Public can't give up its new name, it could do what Meta (another ridiculous name) did, keeping the Facebook and Instagram brand names under the umbrella of Meta. That way we, the listeners and watchers, could keep VPR and Vermont Public Television, and the big suits at Vermont Public could keep their new baby - Vermont Public... what?

Sincerely, Douglas Friant South Londonderry, Vt.

Is the Russia-Ukraine War a threat to the global economy?

REGION - Before Russia stunned the world by invading Ukraine, it was widely believed that the economic ties formed through globalization would help promote peace. But the war is testing that assumption and drawing attention to the vulnerabilities in far-flung supply chains, which were already under pressure because of the pandemic and recovery.

In response to the brutal invasion of Ukraine, the United States, European Union (EU), United Kingdom (UK), and their allies are using financial sanctions to inflict severe damage on Russia's economy and pressure its leaders to end the war. But that effort likely comes at a significant cost to the global economy. P&L Excavating and Trucking "Stumps to stones and everything in between"

Punishing Russia

Western nations acted together in unprecedented fashion to isolate Russia from world trade and the global financial system. Some of Russia's largest banks have been expelled from SWIFT, an international payments system. Assets that Russia's central bank held in North America and Europe have been frozen, restricting its ability to prop up the value of its currency, the ruble.

Germany shelved the opening of a new gas pipeline that would have supplied natural gas from Russia, and the United States and the United Kingdom have announced bans on Russian oil imports. Hundreds of Western companies have suspended operations or pulled out of Russia, the world's 11th largest economy, either to comply with sanctions or because of public outrage over the war.

The effects of sanctions have clearly been felt in Russia, where the central bank raised its key interest rate to 20%, and it's estimated that the Russian economy could contract up to 10%. Until recently, Russia was a full participant in the global economy, so being cut off from Western supply chains and technologies could be painful for Russian businesses and consumers.

Supply Shocks

Russia is a major producer and exporter of food, energy, metals, and other raw materials that often fluctuate in price based on the balance between supply and demand across global markets. Therefore, supply shocks stemming from the war and sanctions have caused price spikes for some high-demand goods.

Russia is a top energy exporter, so crude oil and natural gas prices have surged since the conflict began, largely due to concerns about supply constraints. The EU relies heavily on energy imported from Russia (about 40% of its gas supply and almost 25% of its oil). Thus, reductions in energy deliveries from Russia would be difficult to replace and could worsen shortages in the global market.

Russia and Ukraine account for nearly 30% of global wheat exports, 17% of corn, 32% of barley, and 75% of sunflower seed oil. Financial sanctions have largely blocked Russia from exporting food, while the conflict has prevented Ukraine from transporting food out of the country.

The bottom line is that consumers everywhere may soon face even higher grocery bills. The United Nations projects that global food costs, which are already at an all-time high, could soar another 22% due to the war. Egypt and other developing nations in North Africa, the Middle East, and Asia are especially dependent on grains from Russia and Ukraine. Disrupted food supplies and elevated prices are expected to cause a notable increase in world hunger.

Ripple Effects

Russia and Ukraine account for only about 2% of global gross domestic product, but high-energy prices and supply shocks caused by the war could have a farreaching impact on a global economy that has not fully recovered from the pandemic. The Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) estimates that global economic growth in the first year after the war began will be 1.1% lower, and inflation will be about 2.5% higher, than they would have been without the invasion. The impact will be greatest for countries with closer trade and financial ties to Russia and Ukraine. Throughout the world, people with lower incomes will likely suffer more because food and energy account for a larger share of spending. Russian aggression has caused a humanitarian disaster and an economic catastrophe in Ukraine that are nearly impossible to measure. More than 4 million people have already fled Ukraine, and many more could follow. Without outside help, accommodating the flood of refugees is likely to strain the finances of host governments such as Hungary, Moldova, Poland, Romania, and Slovakia.

Europe has more exposure to the Russia-Ukraine conflict than the United States, but in both economies, inflation had already climbed to levels that haven't been seen for decades. In the coming months, the world's key central banks will face the tricky task of raising interest rat enough to control inflation without causing a recession. There could also be longerterm repercussions, such as the reorganization of global supply chains and less integrated financial markets. Estimates and projections are based on current conditions, are subject to change, and may not come to pass.

George Peter Morrill, 1947-2022

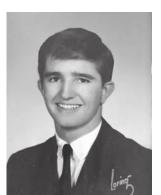

MOODUS, Conn. - After a long illness, battled without complaint, George Peter Morrill passed away in Colchester, Conn. on Jan. 13, 2022. He was 74 years

Born in Hartford, Conn. on April 9, 1947, he was the firstborn child of George Percival Morrill and Phyllis Christensen Morrill. Shortly after his birth, the budding family moved to Westminster, Vt. The first school Peter attended was the Saxtons River Elementary School, and he remembered this period as a time of singular joy and happiness. When he was eight years old, the family, complete now with three more children, returned to Connecticut and settled in the village of Higganum, in the town of Haddam.

Throughout his developmental years, Peter was an effortlessly good student. He loved the outdoors and sports, and he was an asset at Middletown High School, where he excelled in both basketball and baseball. Following high school graduation, seeking adventure, Peter moved to Chicago, Ill., where he took work along the docks of Lake Michigan. While living in Chicago, Peter was drafted into the U.S. Army, to serve the country in the Signal Corps during the Vietnam conflict. He was stationed in Long Binh when the ammunition dump was blown up during the North Vietnamese Tet Offensive in 1968.

After an honorable discharge from the Army and needing to decompress from the war, Peter decided on a new adventure by riding a ten-speed bicycle across the country to Eugene, Ore. While in Oregon, Peter became a devout Catholic. His life was characterized by work, study, and contemplation. He returned to the east coast in his early thirties, first to Higganum, and later to New York City.

Throughout his adult hour.

working life, Peter wore many hats, including that of a truck driver, milkman, radio newsman, and disc jockey, but when he moved to Bridgeport, Conn., he settled into construction work until he retired. In 2006 he returned to Higganum to live with and care for his aging father. Peter stayed with his father until he passed in 2015.

From Higganum, Peter moved to Moodus, Conn., where he enjoyed a life of quiet solitude during his last years. He remained deeply religious, and was committed to tithing a portion of his income every month to charities for the poor and civil rights organizations. He did this until the end of his life.

Peter is survived by three brothers: Michael and wife Laura Wenneker and their two children, Molly and William, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Timothy and his wife Peggy Jordan Morrill and their two children, Matthew and Catherine, of Higganum, Conn. and Putney, Vt. respectively; and Christopher Morrill of Saxtons River, Vt.

There will be a funeral Mass held at the Saint Bridget Catholic Church on 75 Moodus Leesville Road in Moodus, Conn. on Friday, Sept. 30, at 9:30 a.m. Ceremonies will conclude with an interment Mass at Cypress Cemetery, 321 Essex Rd. Westbrook. Conn. There will be no social does hands-on healing. This service will be held at 21 Fairground Rd., Springfield, Vt., and also via Zoom. Followed by an in-person and "virtual" coffee hour. The Zoom link is www.us02web.zoom.us/j/6130779853. Contact uuspringfieldvt@gmail.com for more information.

Summertime text scams ——

REGION - While most consumers experience scam robocalls daily, many also are seeing an increase in the number of scam texts. Criminals use text messages as a way to conduct scams. A text message appears on a cellular phone indicating that there is a problem, an award, or an opportunity. The recipient is told to click on a web address in the message, which is where identity theft occurs.

One example is a text message that has been delivered to many cell phone users in New England. The message appears to be from the United States Postal Service alerting the recipient to undeliverable parcels. The link in the message opens a web page that appears to be from the Postal Service, but on close examination, it does not display www. USPS.com, but appears as www.uspnewlocat.com/ usps/addres#. The page asks for identity information and links to a second page requesting credit card information. For all appearances, this looks official and similar to the real post office website.

As with criminal phone calls, personal protection comes by applying some basic precautions. Think twice before clicking on a website link in a text or email. Government agencies, including the post office, do not communicate this way. If the text message includes a phone number, don't call or click unless you can verify the legitimacy of the number or the web address.

Some good news - On July 21, 2022, the Federal Communications Commission issued an enforcement order against telecommunications companies, requiring them stop carrying calls from known robocall scam warranty marketers. Until now, these companies allowed the scam calls to reach consumers even though they were aware of the problem. This order was an upgrade from a public notice earlier in July allowing phone companies to block the calls. According to the FCC, one known robocaller is responsible for over eight billion calls since 2018. The Commission sent cease-and-desist letters to eight voice service providers to warn them to stop carrying this suspicious traffic. Acting FCC Enforcement Bureau Chief Loyaan A. Egal said in the statement, "Now that U.S. voice service providers know the individuals and entities associated with this scheme, the Enforcement Bureau will closely monitor voice service providers' compliance with this order and take appropriate enforcement action as necessary."

This action was the result of consumer complaints received by the FCC. Reporting scams can reap positive results.

Breanna Elaine performs ——

River, Vt.

Vt. - Breanna Elaine will be performing on Sunday, Aug. 14, 2022, at 7 p.m. at the Stage 33 Live listening room at 33 Bridge Street in Bellows Falls, Vt. There will be a discounted price for advance tickets through the Stage 33 website, and limited seating. Breanna Elaine's earthy folk with rock and jazz flavorings has been making waves and garnering praise, with comparisons to Jewel, Alanis Morissette, and Stevie Nicks. Elaine was born and raised in Brattleboro, where she played violin and bass, and sang for a group that performed in soup kitchens. She moved to Northampton in her teens, where she played in bands and sang in a choir featuring African folk music and other genres. At 18, she moved to the Rutland area. She is currently recording a new studio album.

According to the performer's preference, masks are optional. Tickets are available at www.stage33live. com, or at the door.
