Students and teachers help with restoration of Warren Brook

BY JOEL SLUTSKY
The Shopper

ALSTEAD, N.H. – As area residents know all too well, the town of Alstead experienced the greatest flood in its history in October 2005 and is still recovering.

A flood-plain planting by hundreds of teachers and students from Alstead, Acworth, Charlestown, Lempster and Walpole schools at Warren Brook recently was undertaken in an effort to prevent flooding in the future.

With the guidance of the Cold River Local Advisory Committee, live stake shrubs and trees on the flood plain of Warren Brook were planted to enhance flood protection of the brook.

The sight of all these children harmoniously working together up and down both sides of the flood plain was powerful and heartwarming, many in attendance said. Some of the students weren't even born when the flood took place.

According to Fred Ernst, advisory chair of Cold River Local Advisory Committee, the organization was set up about 15 years ago by the State of New Hampshire to protect the quality, environmental importance, and recreational value of certain designated rivers.

"After the devastating 2005 flood in Alstead, the initial recovery effort was to stabilize the Cold River and its most important tributary, Warren Brook," Ernst said. "At that time the stream bed of Warren Brook had been lowered by six feet and the brook had been straightened, both actions resulting in the flood plains of the brook not functioning. Since then it had been determined that additional work was required to lower the flood plain and restore the curving nature of the brook to make it function naturally and help control the brook under flood conditions."

Fran Macri of the Maple Hill Nursery provided 11,000 plants for the students to put in the ground.

"We have two varieties of plants, a willow and a dogwood that tolerate wet soils and absorb water and they root in quickly to hold the banking," Macri said. "The plants were put in on both sides of the flood plain; the idea is to stabilize all the earth the brook runs through."

Macri gave a planting demonstration to the students, who were then paired off by their teachers to ensure maximum effect.

Ernst gave a brief overview of the importance of their task and emphasized the enormity of the flood, revealing that during the early part of the committee's work an entire car was found buried under the mud.

"Over the last three years, the Cold River Local Advisory Committee has worked with the engineering firm Headwaters Hydrology, DES, and New Hampshire Fish and Game to develop the plan, get approval, obtain sufficient funds, and award the contract to Bazin Brothers Trucking," Ernst said. "The planting of shrubs along the edge of the riverbed is the final phase of this restoration project. It is the third section of 900 feet to be done.

"The original restoration after the devastating flood in 2005 essentially stabilized the bridge. The new work restored the windy nature of the brook and lowered the flood plain around the brook so it can once again absorb high flows of water in the spring and during major rain events. It will also make possible the restoration of fish and other aquatic wildlife that cannot withstand the current high, unrestrained water flows."

Many participants offered comments about the project.

Susan Lichty, a Lempster representative of Cold River Local Advisory Committee, said she lives along the Cold River near its headwater.

"I am very much concerned about the river's ecology and preventing damage," she said.

Eighth-grader Kali from the Charlestown Middle School also commented.

"It's very important to help the local community," she said.

Mitch Harrison, a science teacher at the Vilas Middle School, said their work was needed.

"It's important to do everything we can that concerns the local environment," Harrison said.

Cathy MacDonald, a committee member from Alstead, looked out at the planting being done and summed it up.

"This was once just a rock pile, but soon people will be able to fish again," she said.

Attorney report on Bartonville Bridge read at Selectboard meeting

BY JOEL SLUTSKY

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt. – After much public concern was expressed over the disposal of debris from the Bartonville Bridge destroyed by Tropical Storm Irene, Town Counsel Stephen Ankuda was asked by the Rockingham Town Selectboard to investigate and issue a report.

Ankuda was at a recent Rockingham Selectboard meeting to discuss the disposition of the remains of the Bartonville Bridge.

Ankuda said that he consulted Bartonville Bridge Town Counsel Steven Ankuda.

Kelly Kindestin, property and claims manager at Vermont League of Cities and Towns, which owned the bridge through insurance adjustment; Tim Andrews, Barns and Bridges of New England; Buck Adams, Adams Construction; David Sime, brother-in-law to Municipal Manager Chip Stearns, who got beams from the debris; and Stearns, who disposed of the debris.

Ankuda also read copies of numerous emails pertaining to the debris disposal.

Ankuda said that in 2012, the year after the storm, the Vermont League of Cities and Towns agreed that the entire bridge was covered by insurance. Tim Andrews from Barns and Bridges of New England was hired by Vermont League of Cities and Towns to inventory all the remains of the bridge.

Stearns informed the League of Cities and Towns that he had a place to dispose of the beams on private property, and asked Kindestin if he had her OK to transport the beams.

The correspondence was sent on town email. Kindestin gave permission for Stearns to take the beams.

Within the next few weeks, Stearns, on his own time, transported the pressure-treated beams to a location in New Hampshire owned by his brother-in-law. Stearns does not have any ownership interest in the property.

Ankuda stated he spoke with the brother-in-law specifically whether they were sold to him and he stated,

"absolutely not," but he did reimburse Stearns for the gas for the tractor used to haul the debris

The beams were loaded onto Stearns's own trailer and driven by Stearns to the location and these beams were used to rebuild a dilapidated bridge on the brother-in-law's property.

Selectboard Chair Lamont Barnett asked if these beams were useable, and Ankuda stated that they were.

Ankuda stated that the Vermont League of Cities and Towns was definitely looking to make some money

Proposal for solar array tabled

BY JOEL SLUTSKY
The Shopper

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt. – At a recent Rockingham Town Selectboard meeting, a proposal by Ralph Meima of Green Lantern Capital to purchase land and place a solar array in a town-owned gravel pit was postponed to get more data.

Meima talked about his plans with the board.

"Our goal would be to explore opportunities to develop a solar energy facility on the property with the town as the prime purchaser of the net metering credits generated by the facility," he said.

Meima continued that his organization was willing to pay $45,000 for the five acres. The requested acres are located within a gravel pit at 2089 Rockingham Road (Route 103).

Selectboard Chair Lamont Barnett noted that whether the town leased or sold this land, it would no longer be available for future development.

Selectboard member Stefan Golec discussed the possibility that the lot may be better used as an industrial park, which would make more jobs available in the area.

Selectboard member Ann DiBernardo asked if Green Lantern would consider purchasing the entire 42 acres.

Meima stated that they would only be requesting a portion that is tucked away at the northern end.

Golec asked about the net value of credits and said he would also like more information on the value of the property.

Peter Golec agreed and suggested putting this on the next agenda.

A motion was passed unanimously to table the Green Lantern proposal to purchase the land, until the Nov. 15 Selectboard meeting, and get a property value from the Listers' Office.

In other business, Municipal Manager Chip Stearns said the park and ride lot should be completed this week, weather permitting. However, it will not be open until probably mid-December, due to lighting installation.

The Highway Department was out last Thursday due to very heavy, wet snow causing a significant number of trees down, including eight on the

Christmas Stocking Bazaar

SAXTONS RIVER, Vt. - When the doors open and the crowd pours in for this year's Christmas Stocking Bazaar at Christ's Church Saturday, Nov. 12, only a handful of attendees will remember the beginnings of this annual event 60 years ago.

The story is that the bazaar began with an ice cream soda social at the former Congregational Church that now houses the historical society museum and moved to its present location when the Baptist and Congregational churches decided it made sense to join forces to save money.

"I vaguely remember the bazaar at the current location of the historical society," reminisced Saxtons River native Louise Frey Deiss in a recent e-mail. "My memories are pretty foggy, but it could be that Irene Kibbe made dried arrangements - and my mom probably baked a roaster full of beans to sell by the quart... Mrs. Musgrave crocheted beautiful snowflakes to hang on a Christmas tree, and Rhoe-na Longley would sew nice things..."

The event features a food pantry where homemade baked goods, preserves, baked beans and fudge tempt buyers of every age; an Arts and Crafts table whose hats, mittens, aprons, potholders, Christmas ornaments and other handmade creations are proudly displayed by their creators; and a Santa's Land for kids to have time out to decorate cookies and make a craft to take home.

The Attic Treasure Room is a maze of useful and head-scratcher items pulled from attics and offered at rock bottom prices with a "take-it-we-want-to-get-rid-of-it-attitude."

Bazaar-goers head downstairs to the tea room to be served a cinnamon bun and coffee or a sandwich and chips while seasonal piano music plays in the background.

Doors open at 9 a.m. and attendees are advised to be their early for the best buys.

BRIDGE

back on the components. Trusses were cut down, loaded and transported to Andrews' property in New Hampshire.

Ankuda noted that the debris sat in the Route 103 gravel pit for a long time. Ankuda noted that Andrews stated that he felt some of this debris would have been useable if it had not sat in the elements for so long, but this was Vermont League of Cities and Towns' debris and the town had allowed the league to use the gravel pit for storage from 2011 to March 2016, and during that time the league worked with Andrews to decide what to do with the debris.

On Aug. 1, resident Sue Hammond wrote a letter on the matter asking for an inquiry, and asked that Stearns read the letter aloud at a Selectboard meeting scheduled for Aug. 2.

At that time Stearns sent another email to Kindestin to confirm that he had permission to remove this debris personally, and Kindestin stated she understood that "the town was disposing of the debris for the league and the league would pay for this."

Ankuda noted that based on Kindestin's correspondence, it doesn't say that she understood that Stearns was doing this on his own. When it became an issue, Stearns made arrangements for Adams to go to Tim Andrews' place and retrieve debris and Stearns himself retrieved the creosote beams.

Ankuda concluded his analysis with three areas of policy concern for the transfer of the Bartonville debris.

"When Stearns accepted the responsibility to dispose of the debris, all appearances were that he was in his capacity of town manager and acted in that position to distribute some of the pressure-treated beams to a family member," the attorney said.

"Had Stearns arranged for the bridge remains to be delivered to a charity or school or unrelated party, I doubt anyone would fault him for failing to mention to the board or the public that some useable remains may be available. The other applicable town policy is the Code of Ethics, specifically Section 2.4 (e) concerning the use of public property which may not be applicable because the debris was not public property. However, Adams, allowing Chip to use his tractor, could be considered in violation under Section 2.4 (c) where Stearns accepted a favor from Adams by allowing the use of Adams' tractor. The provision is actually conditioned upon such favor intending to use a public employee in the proper discharge of his official duties."

"The last applicable policy is the (Town) Fraud Policy," Ankuda said, "where, under the definition of misconduct and dishonesty, the misappropriation of assets, including assets of the town, our citizens, suppliers and others with whom we have a business relationship is included in part of the definition. I have seen nothing that would suggest that the Vermont League of Cities and Towns believes that there were any misappropriations of assets."

Outside the room where an executive session on the issue was taking place, Stearns talked about the outcome.

"The board has made this a personal issue," he said. "If the board decides I did something wrong, I would be curious to see how they come up with it."

When the executive session was over, Barnett set up an emergency joint board meeting for Nov. 3 between the Rockingham Selectboard and Bellows Falls Village Trustees. That meeting has been held but results have not been released.

This Selectboard meeting can be viewed on www.fact8.com.

Port Road.

Stearns stated that they would like to thank whoever assisted the town by removing some of these trees on both the Port Road and on Paradise Hill.

Stearns said the winter parking ban is now in effect. There is no parking on the streets in both the villages of Bellows Falls and Saxtons River from midnight to 7 a.m. In addition, there is no parking on any street or road during and 24 hours following a snowstorm, and vehicles will be towed without notice at owner's expense.

He said the Bridge Street Bridge sidewalk should be completed by the end of this week and paving of the bridge will follow.

The Bellows Falls Water Project on Route 5 north will shut down for the winter by Friday, Nov. 11 and begin again on April 23, 2017.

For those connected to the Bellows Falls Water System, there appears to be a significant leak totaling 50 gallons per minute in the village. It is thought that this may be a vacant building and the Water Department asked that if anyone hears water running or sees evidence of a leak to contact them at 802 463-1232.

Fairpoint Communications request for a license to bury lines was tabled at the last meeting due to the board's concern on the possibility of remaining overhead wires.

A representative from Fairpoint was present to answer any questions. Stearns stated that he and Highway Superintendent Mike Hinde had met with representatives from Fairpoint and the contractor.

The new lines will go under the sidewalk to an existing pole, and then underground to the bridge.

A motion passed to approve the request from Fairpoint Communications for Rockingham Street.

Listers Camilla Roberts, Paul Noble and Michael Harty discussed a request for C. Roberts Sansoucy to do a new appraisal of TransCanada hydroelectric project property for 2017.

Roberts stated that the listers are seeking authority from the board for Stearns to sign an agreement with Sansoucy to perform a new appraisal on the hydro facility and land at a cost of $35,000.

Barnett questioned why the appraisal did not go out to bid, and Noble stated the results would not be competitive, as Sansoucy, because of its relationship with the town during a prior reappraisal, has a significant amount of data that another company would have to develop from scratch.

Roberts noted that there is $25,000 budgeted and the state has provided funds over the years for this type of reappraisal.

Selectman Stefan Golec noted that the board can waive the policy, and he agreed with the listers to continue the town's investment with Sansoucy.

A motion passed that the board suspend the purchasing policy and authorize the municipal manager to enter into an agreement with Sansoucy for a new appraisal of the hydroelectric facility and land.

A motion passed that the Rockingham Selectboard approve the tax stabilization request from Chroma Technology for the April 2017 grand list value of the town portion only, excluding the education portion, for the duration of the firm's expansion project. The company will pay full education taxes during the project.

The tax stabilization agreement is between the Town of Rockingham and the Brattleboro Development Credit Corporation Real Estate Holdings Inc. II.

Stearns was authorized to sign the agreement on behalf of the town.

"We are now 33.33 percent into the fiscal year and there are no issues that I've noticed," Stearns said of the current budget.

Stearns reminded everyone that taxes are due on Nov. 10, by 4:30 p.m. About 44 percent of taxes have already been collected.

Selectboard member Ann DiBernardo asked if the town had enough salt and sand, and Stearns said that everything is full due to the mild winter last year, and the town has a contract for guaranteed delivery if necessary.

OVRCC wins Vermont Tourism Grant

REGION - The Vermont Department of Tourism and Marketing has named the Okemo Valley Regional Chamber of Commerce as one of 13 Vermont organizations and businesses that will receive this year's "Market Vermont" matching grant. Each grant recipient will receive between $5,000 - $10,000 to promote themselves outside of the state. OVRCC received $10,000!

The "Market Vermont" grant monies are to be invested exclusively in out-of-state marketing, advertising, promotion, sales materials, publicity, trade shows, consumer events, or other activities that are specifically designed to encourage out-of-state guests to visit Vermont, individually or in groups. A panel comprised of members of the Vermont Travel and Recreation Council chose the grant recipients.

"We were quite impressed by the high number of Vermont businesses and organizations that submitted applications for this year's "Market Vermont" program," said Vermont Department of Tourism and Marketing Commissioner Megan Smith.

"The group of recipients selected by the Vermont Travel and Recreation Council panel conveyed strong plans for projects that we believe will extend marketing messages beyond our state's borders, and ultimately attract visitors to Vermont."

The grant proposal submitted by the Okemo Valley Chamber focused on using the grant funds to target the Chinese/Americans who already live in the NY/NJ tri-State area. They plan to implement a multi-media winter campaign to start utilizing their grant.

Congratulations to all of the 13 Grant Recipients: Okemo Valley Regional Chamber of Commerce, Bennington Area Chamber of Commerce, Vermont Gran Fondo, Chandler Music Hall, Jay Peak Area Chamber of Commerce, Lake Champlain Regional Chamber of Commerce, Mad River Valley Marathon, Manchester Designer Outlets, Northeast Kingdom Travel & Tourism Association, Vermont Adaptive Ski & Sports, Vermont Maple Sugarmakers, Vermont Fresh Network, and Vermont Wood Manufacturers.

Act 46 Update from TRSU

REGION - The Two Rivers Supervisory Union Act 46 committee met on October 25 and November 1 to engage with members of the public, review administrative recommendations for the education of students in grades pre-K through grade 12, and review tax rate projections. The present charge of the Act 46 committee is: "To study the advisability of forming a union school district."

The single school district would create a new governance structure with one school budget, one pre-CLA tax rate, and one school board from Chester to Mount Holly. Additionally, local school districts would no longer own their schools; the larger union school district would own them. The outcome of the committee's work will require a positive vote in each town to create the single school district.

In May the committee tasked the administrative team with determining a model that would not only provide more opportunities for our students, but would also save enough money to make the impact on the pre-CLA tax rate neutral or better for each town. The Superintendent, Meg Alison Powden, presented their recommendation on September 20.

The team recommends maintaining all elementary schools and making them Pre-K - 5, or K - 5, depending on how those communities handle pre- K now. Then, having a regional middle school for all towns and grades 6 - 8 at the location of the current Black River Union Middle School/High School. Finally, a regional high school for students of all towns and grades 9 - 12 would attend at Green Mountain Union High School. Hopefully a specific program for dual enrollment and/or a Castleton component in the future housed in Ludlow. The specific savings for the entire model will be reviewed at a later meeting of the committee. The committee is also taking input on alternative ideas.

At the meeting held on November 1 in Ludlow, we heard from many residents with comments ranging from positive to negative. We appreciated the feedback as well as the thoughtful ideas and suggestions.

We welcome questions and comments from members of all of our communities and encourage you to participate.

Public input will be provided for as an agenda item at all meetings, either before or after the committee conducts its business on the following dates:

- November 16th, 6:00 at Mount Holly Elementary School
- December 6th, 6:00 at Town Hall in Baltimore
- December 14th, 6:00 at Black River Union MS/HS

All of the information the committee has reviewed is available online at any of the school websites or at the supervisory union website trsu.org by clicking on the Act 46 link on the left side of the home page. You can also find the names of your town representatives to the committee in the Act 46 materials.

Respectfully,
Your Act 46 Study Committee

Westminister West Public Library gets Literacy Grant

WESTMINSTER, Vt. - On Thursday November 10, the children in the Westminister area will be treated to a storytelling event by author and illustrator Jim Arnosky. This event is sponsored by the Children's Literacy Foundation (CLIF) through a grant won by the Westminister West Library with the help of the Community Education Support Committee of the Westminister Community School Board. There will be three events that day, one at the Westminster West School for the K/1 students, one at the Westminister West Public Library for the preschool aged children, and one at the Westminister Center School for grades 2 - 6.

Jim Arnosky has written a lot of fabulous books introducing young and elementary school- aged children to nature. He is a fantastic illustrator and he has invented the wonderful character of Crinkleroot who takes children into nature and teaches them about birds, mammals, fish, tracking, how to care for our planet, and so much more.

The grant allowed the Westminister West Library to select $2,000 worth of wonderful new books for the library's children's collection. The school library received $500 worth of books, and the youngest children will all receive a free book to take home. In addition to Jim Arnosky's event, there will be a spring performance by renowned storyteller Duncan McDougall.

A day of hunting to remember

The story below was recently written by Ed Peck of Springfield; Had this deer been weighed when first shot and with the heart & liver, it would have weighed over 250 pounds.

"Early in the first week of the 1955 deer season, Howard and Lucy Peck, of Springfield, Vt., headed off to a hunting camp on the backside of Okemo Mountain to join their friends Charlie and Jean Abbott, also of Springfield. Not too far north of Weston a large buck was seen running from the woods on the side of Terrible Mountain toward the road. Howard stopped his Jeep beside the highway and quickly retrieved the first rifle he came to... his father's cherished Model 94. The first shot, after the buck crossed the road, broke his left foreleg causing him to turn broadside; the second put him down.

Shortly, several hunters came from the woods across the road and were none too happy. They had spent many days scouting pre-season and then actively hunting for this deer since opening day. But, very sportsman like, they helped with the field dressing and loading him onto the hood. Back then it was still customary to carry your deer on the front of the vehicle. The next day on an improvised scale at Polidor's Market in North Springfield and, with his head still on the floor, the deer registered 200 pounds.

Howard and Lucy finally got headed again toward the Abbott camp, arriving much later than anticipated. Charlie and Jean were still waiting and more than glad to help hang the buck alongside a 160 lb. buck already on the game pole. After some storytelling and celebrating, snow started to fall. Charlie talked about seeing signs of a 'monster' deer higher up the mountain, and he surmised that this storm might get deer moving down into the lower softwoods. It should be noted that Charlie was a hunter/woodsman from the word go and almost never had to settle for 'deer track stew' to sustain him through the winter. He convinced Howard to accompany him in case he needed help and down the old road that ran past the camp they headed, then uphill into an old chopping. Charlie circled high while Howard and Howard used to tell of the tough climb up through the fresh snow being tempered by the excitement. That excitement was short-lived, though, as the two hunters realized that the shortest distance back to camp was to go slightly uphill. Even slightly uphill, the slippery, fresh fallen snow and weight of the buck did not allow them to drag him more than a few feet at a time before having to rest.

The two scratched their heads, so to speak, and decided that the best solution was for Howard to go back to camp, get their wives and Jeep and somehow get all up through the snowy woods close to where Charlie and his deer would be. On the way out Howard located an old brook bed that looked to be the best route back up the mountain. With the women helping to clear brush, fallen trees, and sometimes prying large rocks out of the way, they eventually made it through the darkness to where Charlie waited. The rear seat was still in the back of the Jeep, so they thought the best place for the deer was on the hood and the women in the back. What no one gave any thought to was that the Jeep was still headed uphill, more snow had fallen since arrival, and they had a serious weight imbalance. The Jeep could not get enough traction to be turned around. So, the back seat was removed, the buck pulled off the hood and tucked into small area in back. He was beginning to stiffen up by this time and some creative methods of bending him to fit were undoubtedly required. Jean, the smaller of the two women, found room in back, on top of the deer, to ride and Lucy rode in front.

Charlie also came up with the idea of packing down snow around the Jeep so that, if necessary, he could use the iron pry bar that Howard had brought along to help twist the Jeep around if needed. Fortunately, Charlie was a tall, strong person and it did take his help to do just that. He also got to walk down to the woods road as there wasn't any room for him to ride. A testament to the toughness of the Jeep CJs of that era should have been written after this experience as the heavily-loaded vehicle made the round trip stayed lower.

After not too long a wait, Howard saw two deer headed downhill. They both appeared large even through the falling snow. He checked them with his binoculars and quickly saw that one certainly looked like a monster. He scanned the woods and saw Charlie with his rifle to his shoulder, shooting not too many seconds later. The buck went down without any dents or broken parts.

Shortly before the 72-hour check-in limit was reached the buck was taken to the Weston check station and weighed. Charlie's son, Rick, recalls weighed 238 lbs. The rack was never scored. Following the phone conversation he and Howard's son, Ed, had regarding the information contained in this story, Rick had the rack scored by an official Boone & Crockett scorer in Soldotna, AK. The score was 140 1/8."

If you don't eat the heart and liver don't leave it in the woods. Save it for me. Question: Do you remember "Side Hill Cronchers?"

Act 46 a controversial state law Op-Ed: Hug a veteran

Developing a merger plan for eight towns in the huge Windham Central Supervisory Union is not a simple thing.

But the two Act 46 study committees working on the effort are already doing something right: they're trying to get as much public input as possible.

Residents won't get to vote on merger proposals until March 2017, but the committees are posting videos, sending emails and flyers, and putting minutes and information on Internet websites to let the public know what's happening.

Act 46 is the controversial 2015 state law that pushes for school district consolidation with a goal of cutting costs and increasing educational opportunities for students.

Many parents and residents don't want to lose their local schools, though, citing a loss of local control and community identity, not to mention the more personal education pupils get at small schools.

Windham Central's Act 46 plan does not include any school closures. The committees believe larger, unified districts will share resources and expenses better.

The plan thus far: the Leland & Gray Union towns, Brookline, Jamaica, Newfane, Townshend and Windham, would do a pre-K-through-12 merger and have one school board.

Those towns now have four elementary schools with independent boards, and middle and high school students attend the regional Leland & Gray school, which also has its own board.

Dover, Marlboro and Wardsboro would merge into a unified district with pre-kindergarten through either sixth or eighth grade, with school choice for the higher grades. Dover and Wardsboro currently have pre-K-through-six elementary schools, while Marlboro has pre-K-through-eight.

Instead of a dozen separate school boards, the plan would result in just three.

The plan is to have the mergers voted on at Town Meeting Day in March 2017. If voters say yes, the mergers would take effect on July 1, 2019.

Both committees are trying to finish their plans by the end of the year.

And they say they're looking for advice and comments from the public in the affected towns before anything is finalized.

We'd like to commend them for that effort. It's a difficult process that's taken a long time, and the study committees have tried to do it right.

As Veteran's Day approaches this Friday, November 11, Win Smith, Jr., president and majority owner of Sugarbush Resort in Vermont, and former chairman of Merrill Lynch International, shares a personal letter:

"Just before Veteran's Day in 1968 my stepfather, dressed up in his Navy uniform and holding a toy sailor, put a revolver to his head and committed suicide on our front steps in Litchfield, Connecticut.

Admiral Charles Butler McVay III was in need of hugging, but instead he took his own life to ease his pain. Charles had a distinguished naval career until the night of July 29, 1945. As captain of the USS Indianapolis, he was ordered to sail as quickly as possible from San Francisco to the island of Tinian in the South Pacific carrying a secret cargo guarded by marines around the clock. This cargo was the atomic bomb that was dropped on Hiroshima on August 6 of that year. After dropping the cargo, the Indianapolis was ordered to sail to Leyte to join up with the rest of the fleet. Charles requested a destroyer escort as was the norm, but this request was denied and he was told there were no reports of enemy submarines along his route. This was not true.

Near midnight on July 29, Japanese submarine I-58 surfaced and Captain Hashimoto spotted an indistinct object. Betting that it was an American ship, he fired two torpedoes that moments later hit the Indianapolis broadside. It severed the communication system and the ship sunk within twelve minutes, killing nearly half of the sailors onboard. My stepfather was thrown off the bridge and into the sea and spent the next four days adrift with members of his crew. Nearly half of the survivors perished, many of them eaten by sharks.

Incredibly, the Navy had "lost" the Indianapolis and did not realize that it had never made port. Only a lucky sighting by a naval aircraft that spotted an oil slick and descended to take a closer look allowed the remaining sailors to be rescued.

Charles often said he wished he had gone down with his ship or perished with the others in the sea. That would have been better than the betrayal he endured at the hands of his beloved Navy. They needed a scapegoat to cover up their egregious mistakes. Charles was court-martialed for "failing to order abandon ship" and "failing to zig-zag" when even the enemy submarine captain testified that it would have made no difference. Shockingly, Captain Hashimoto had been called to testify by the Navy against my stepfather but his unexpected opinion was ignored.

My stepfather was found guilty on the charge of failing to zigzag. The court sentenced him to lose 100 numbers in his temporary rank of Captain and 100 numbers in his permanent rank of Commander. In 1946, at the behest of Admiral Nimitz who had become Chief of Naval Operations, Secretary Forrestal remitted Charles's sentence and restored him to duty. But his naval career was over. He was never fully exonerated but did serve out his time at a desk job in the New Orleans Naval District and retired in 1949 with the rank of Rear Admiral.

Charles and my mother had known each other in their youthful years in Washington, DC. After both their spouses passed away, they were reacquainted and married in 1962.

Charles did not speak about the Indianapolis very much, but even as a young boy I sensed it pained him greatly, and I heard his story from my mother and brother. He was brought to tears at times when he received hate mail from the parents of sailors who had perished. Believing the court-martial verdict, they held him responsible for the death of their sons. The survivors, however, had a different viewpoint based on their firsthand knowledge. They held an annual reunion in Indianapolis, Indiana and invited Charles to attend, which he finally did once in 1960. When he entered the room, they all saluted. He was greeted with affection and respect by all. The survivors knew him as a good captain who looked out for them, and they knew he had been made a scapegoat. One told him, "If the war had continued, all of us would have been proud to serve under you again. Not one of us ever blamed you for a second." They tried in vain for years to get him exonerated. Ultimately that happened in 1998. Unfortunately, that was thirty years too late.

Friday, November 11, hug all the veterans you know.

Charles was well liked in our hometown of Litchfield, Connecticut. He loved bridge and hunting and fishing as well as carving small wooden boats and working around our farm. The last time I saw him was when he came to watch me play soccer. A few days later he was dead. It was a shock, and I could not fathom why he did this. I knew that Charles and my mother were not getting along that well anymore, but I did not understand his loneliness and his pain. Only years later did I appreciate what I missed and how I could have helped this good but tortured man. I wish I had understood this earlier. I wish I had hugged him. I wish our government had hugged him. I wish everyone who knew the story of this courageous veteran had hugged him. Had we, I think he would have lived to see his exoneration.

This story of my stepfather may be unique in some ways but it is also similar to what so many veterans experience. This Friday, November 11, hug all the veterans you know. You might save a life."

Op-Ed: Hummingbirds are no match against giant whirling machetes

Vermont has been a leader with environmental quality and land use planning and enforcement. The citizens of Vermont need to weigh carefully permissions to allow wind turbines to be on forested ridgelines in particular. This is a life and death situation when it comes to wildlife and neotropical migratory birds that are protected under international treaties. How can we expect Canada and Mexico to adhere to the laws if we can't provide leadership here in Vermont and the United States?

Migrating birds are national and international treasures. They are also the litmus paper for now and the future. They are predictors of human health "down the road". We all need to look at the big picture-protecting our natural world that will in turn protect us. If we insist on keeping our attention focused on the physical environment-pollution, the shortage of fresh water, the shrinkage of arable land, and human-forced climate change, instead of Earth's living environment, including all its species and all the ecosystems they compose, we will lose both-because each depends on the other a paraphrase from E.O. Wilson's book "Half Earth: Our

Planet's Fight for Life."

Ruby-throated hummingbirds have a natural curiosity as many readers have discovered through their own personal experiences. They are also easily drawn to attention provided and become up close and "personal". The sugar water that is provided at your doorstep or front deck attracts them and they become trusting. They provide much joy and interest. They are also fragile and vulnerable and need their woodland nesting areas and safe unbroken migratory routes to sustain their species - as with all neotropical migratory birds as well as year round residents.

At almost 3 inches in length, and weighing 2 ounces, the ruby throated hummingbird is one of the most remarkable and loved birds on Earth. A remarkable long distance traveler, they can travel as far south as Costa Rica where they spend our winter months. Along the travel route, many cross the Gulf of Mexico going 5 hours non-stop to reach their final destination.

As habitats shrink, north to south, along migration routes of birds, it has become more critical than ever to very carefully weigh plans and decisions that disrupt natural habitats - as with the forested mountain ridgelines here in Vermont.

Wise use of energy sources and conservation are now challenges we face moving forward. Solar energy is making strong gains and, carefully planned, is showing great and growing promises to be significant in meeting demands.

Wind turbines, however, pose a real problem in terms of efficiency - compared to solar- and a very serious concern for wildlife and wildlife habitat. As we are celebrating the 100th anniversary of International Migratory Bird Treaties with Canada, the U.S. and Mexico, that protect international migratory birds, it is imperative that any displacement of habitat for neotropical migratory birds in particular is carefully done with scientific studies by accredited professionals, and hard data is made available, before any wind turbine projects are provided with permits to build.

Permitting is a serious business when it comes to protecting wildlife. Federal and State laws require permits to take and hold injured birds. These regulations are designed to protect fragile animals from being further injured by untrained hands. That is why there is a network of accredited wildlife rehabilitation organizations. Fish & Wildlife agencies have responsibilities for education and enforcement.

Loss of habitat is a current, very critical challenge. Every acre lost to development will result in some displacement of wildlife species. Fragmentation is a very serious issue. When considering the equivalent of a 4-lane highway that is cut in order to get the wind turbine equipment to its destination, the harsh fragmentation begins.

When the 500-foot blades are put in place, the death of international migratory birds as well as local and regional species begins and it doesn't end! These huge machetes in the sky are killing machines to birds and bats in particular. There are many studies that have proven this out and Federal Fish & Wildlife personnel in the West have alarming numbers of deaths reported from areas where studies have been ongoing. One area resulted in more than 4000 bald and golden eagle "kills" within one year of study.

By Marshal Case, International Bird Expert, former senior vice president of the National Audubon Society

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor,

On behalf of The Vermont Veterans' Home, I want to express my appreciation for the remarkable donation received on October 25.

These funds will support unfunded and short funded programs that directly impact the care, welfare, and facilities our Veterans enjoy; in fact, we looking towards a piece of equipment which will directly assist in the recuperation and physical rehabilitation of our Veterans.

I am acutely aware of the enormous effort required to accomplish an event such as the Vermont Wounded Warriors Golf Tournament. This year's tournament is the standard for all others to follow.

Observing the fellowship our veterans enjoyed at this event is in itself, a most heartwarming experience for all involved. Witnessing the Warriors, both men and women tell stories, jokes, and laugh, the true mission of the event was on display for all to see. Those non-veterans who attended were caught up in the significance of the occasion.

Please know all of us associated with the Vermont Veterans' Home are extremely grateful for this extraordinary gift, and are fully aware of the immense behind the scenes effort involved to bring it all together.

Thank any veteran this Friday.

Veterans Day is a day that we thank every veteran, past and present, for their unwavering service to our grateful Country.

Let us all remember that if it were not for their dedication, we would not have the rights and freedoms their sacrifices afford us all.

We live in the greatest nation in the world because of their commitment to duty, honor and country. Please join with me and take a minute of your day to thank any veteran and also their family for their service.

Thank you,

Unusual Disney movie, "Maleficent"

As the child grows, Aurora is caught in the middle of the seething conflict between the forest kingdom she has grown to love and the human kingdom that holds her legacy.

Autumnal Dionysia

SPRINGFIELD, Vt. - Springfield High School Theater Department Presents: Autumnal Dionysia: Featuring Antigone Now a short drama by Melissa Cooper inspired by the Greek Playwright Sophocles and The Frogs: A Modern adaptation by Don Zolidis a comedy inspired by Greek Playwright Aristophanes.

Show times are Friday, November 18 and Saturday, November 19 at 7 p.m. and Sunday, November 20 at 2 p.m. All shows are by donation.

The 1st semester Theater class consisting of 28 students have worked together to produce and perform these shows. The two shows are directed by three junior Theater students. The reasoning behind calling this year's production Autumnal Dionysia is because the Greeks would have four celebrations for Dionysus, a God of Harvest and Fertility. During these celebrations, plays would be performed in his honor. The Rural Dionysia celebration took place in early December, since the class is performing during Autumn, we decided to adapt and combine Greek culture and Vermont culture and have our own Autumnal Dionysia: Celebration of Theater and Harvest.

Antigone Now - In the midst of a bombed-out city still feeling the aftershocks of war, the rebellious and intense Antigone defies her uncle to bury her disgraced brother. This contemporary response to the myth of Antigone brings powerful, modern prose to an ancient and universal story. (Description from www.play-scripts.com)

The Frogs: A Modern Adaptation - Disgusted with the state of current entertainment, Dionysus, God of Wine and Poetry, decides that it's time to retrieve Shakespeare from the underworld. Surely if the Bard were given a series on HBO, he'd be able to raise the level of discourse! Accompanied by his trusted servant, Xanthias (the brains of the operation), Dio-

You Don't Know What You've Got 'til It's Gone

We've lived in Grafton for 26 years in the house my husband's father built. My husband is a sugar maker, and we have a sugar bush behind the house and across the road. We rent trees from our neighbors, the Wrights. My husband is a tree hugger, and my dad was a logger and taught me a lot.

We learned from the best—the old timers. We have to keep the history going, you know. They'd be pretty upset to hear about the wind turbines going up on top of the mountains. We've already lost our farms, and now they're taking our mountains. I wish these people would think about what they are affecting. All of us are going to be affected.

They'll have to blast for over a year, and with turbines 10 football fields high, how far down will they need to go to anchor them? And what's going to happen with the cement, Babe? I've seen rain wash everything away, but not the cement.

And what about the bribe -- how can people go for that? Who cares about the money when they're clearing our Green Mountains? Where's the common sense? They're thinking of the almighty dollar, but the almighty dollar is destroying the land. So are you really going to enjoy that dollar? I just don't get it.

The timber company bought the land after the flood in '96. Why did they buy that land anyway when it had already been clearcut? I invited the forester to our home to talk about the Stiles Brook. Who's to say the brook is not going to let go again?

I'm afraid that what happened in '96, 2001 and 2011 could happen again with the clear cutting and cement. In 1996, I had boulders coming into the house. Yes, the Stiles Brook came down on my house. We had hovering rain of 3 1/2 inches in one hour. In less than 15 minutes flat, we had 10 feet of flooding in our yard and 2 1/2 feet in the house.

It all has to do with Mother Nature. It's all to do with her. She can give it. She can take it. And when she wants to pour on this world, nothing can stand in her way.

Bellows Falls Football

The Bellows Falls Terriers battle for the Vermont Division II State Football Championship in a 2 p.m. contest at Rutland High School this Saturday. They will meet the number one seeded Burr +Burton Bulldogs. These two teams have met two years in a row now in the title game and are clearly the class of Vermont Division II football.

Jake Lober, pictured here running the football, had almost 200 total yards of offense in the game and has been leading the Terrier deep stable of backs in recent games. Logan Cota, another hard running back from the same stable, is pictured in the background. BF Coach Lockerby said of Lober, "There was something about him tonight. He wanted everything."

The Bellows Falls Terriers advanced to the state title game by defeating Fair Haven 42-28 at Hadley Field last Friday night. Fair Haven scored first for a 7-0 advantage and put some fear into the Terriers (Coach Bob Lockerby- "Early they ran a lot of plays to our little. I didn't expect they would slow us down as much as they did, but eventually it came down to the team who made the fewest mistakes and we made the fewest mistakes." FH sophomore quarterback Cameron Colloutti (6) was a threat to the Terrier defense all night, BUT, there were enough plays like this, by Sawyer Reis (34) and DJ Snide (57) to keep him and the Slaters at a distance.

Elks Hoop Shoot

SPRINGFIELD, Vt. - The Elks Hoop Shoot will be held at the Springfield High School in Springfield, VT. on Saturday November 19 at 9 a.m. It is open to all boys and girls ages 8 to 13 based on your age as of April 1, 2017. The coverage for the Bellows Falls 1971 championship football team stated that Ann Hadley represented the late Ken Hadley. He is not deceased, but couldn't make it to the championship event. We apologize for any concerns or miscommunications!

THIS AND THAT

BY BILL MURPHY

That final leaf I was watching out the window last week, just peering at waiting for it to fall, made its way to the ground, signifying that our 2016 Fall Sports season is just about complete. What a fall it was. Any season that graces our area with a state championship is big, but when our teams capture three state championships (in two days or 28 hours to be exact) that is really incredibly special news! While biding my time, waiting for the celebrations to end, here are some thoughts that sneaked through my gray matter to enter my consciousness, which I will pass on to you:

The Bellows Falls Boys are still alive in high school football but have a tall task facing Burr + Burton in the Division II state title game Saturday in Rutland at 2 p.m. Most so-called experts, believe Burr +Burton is the better team, however it doesn't matter what anyone thinks, if the Terriers score more points than the Bulldogs Saturday. One reason people tend to favor the lads from Manchester is supposedly they are more athletic. Football is also a game of strength. Again, it all does not matter. The scoreboard will sort this out.

Celebrations are customary in each region or town when a team is good and lucky enough to win a state title. Caravans and fire trucks and vehicles of the like, were brought out for our champions from Bellows Falls, Fall Mountain and Springfield and parades were staged.

Fall Mountain has always had players from different towns to think about, but the Springfield folk are not use to a multi-town approach for a celebration, yet played things up well.

On the way back from Burlington, the bus detoured through Windsor to parade and show off the champions. There were sad days in Windsor in the fall of 2015, when there were not enough players to keep field hockey alive. This year any interested Yellow Jacket sticker could choose to put on the Green and White. A few made the commitment and they did their part in making this amazing ride possible. That is not just the ride on the field, but the celebration ride as well.

A long overdue salute to BF field hockey coach Bethany Coursen - it took her fellow coaches consistency of recognition to point out to me- how really special her job of building a championship program has been. There were days when she had to teach fundamentals and prepare to play an opponent at the same time, with as few as fourteen girls, or sometimes even less. When she had players with talent, but no depth, she became tied to a level of conditioning, which was the only way possible of narrowing the gap with the top teams. Coursen has kept that regimen up, even now, when she has the depth.

She started her PUPS program about a decade ago so, "Eventually (like now) you can coach the extra stuff and you don't have to worry about the fundamentals because they are already there."

How did the coaches show me how special she is? Well she has been "Coach of the Year" in the Marble Valley League for four years in a row and Coursen has also been Division III Coach of the Year on the State level two years running. Those awards are voted on by the coaches and they have a way in every sport of splitting up the honors if someone has won it before. Coursen keeps earning it and the leaders have appropriately given her the recognition.

In closing, one of the states most successful Division I field hockey coaches said to me Saturday, "Those BF players can really pass. You mean to tell me they don't play on this type of turf a lot. Their passes were right on all day. It didn't matter where on the field a pass was needed, they made it. They had some length of the field breaks, which were amazing". Bethany Coursen, stand up and take a bow.

We did an article a few weeks back about the BF Field Hockey team because they seemed to be on an express journey deep into the play-offs. The truth be told, we did not see the same journey for the Springfield and Fall Mountain title teams. The truth is, we should have seen the Lady Wildcats coming. They were headed to the number one seed with a purpose, but still, we kind of miscalculated. They had their challenges along the way, but the school has developed quite a tradition in the sport in the last decade.

Rising to the top like the Red Sox (no titles in my lifetime and then 2004, 2007, 2013), Fall Mountain Girls Soccer had never won a state crown in their lifetime until 2008 and then they went back to back and then again this year. WOW!!! I was also wowed by the fact the program had never won in the early days of the school. The school opened its' doors in the fall of 1967 and until 2008 had never won the prize. Fall Mountain has always been soccer country and this is a fitting award for the community.

Springfield has come full circle. Many have heard the phrase "if at first you don't succeed, try, try again." There are people who spend a lifetime trying and never capture the prize. Lyndsie Perkins the co-head coach (with Kelly DeAngelis- "one of us would not have taken the job without the other") played for the Cosmos a decade ago and her team found their way to the title game, but lost.

Now, she came storming back as a Cosmo in a different light, as a coach. We pried on how much different the experience is, being a coach versus as being a player in a title game? Perkins told us, "Time seems to move more slowly as a coach. I found myself continually looking up at the clock. It's just a different view. As a coach we look holistically at a lot of things. As a player, you are kind of dialed in to what you need to do. I think there is a huge difference."

One of the most impressive performers we happened to see this fall in any sport was Springfield field hockey goalie Aunna Parker. We caught her "Player of the Year" nominee performance against Bellows Falls, when she turned away an unheard of 40 plus shots in a 1-0 loss to the offensively powerful Terriers. She did not let a single ball by in in the title-winning contest versus Woodstock in the 1-0 triumph.

When we spoke to her following the game she commented, "I was shaking before today's game. I was determined to help us win. I think every shot, regardless of what it looks like, is a challenge."

From a spectator's seat, it looked like Woodstock's final shot could have been a real challenge, but it went wide. We asked Aunna what she saw on that one? "I was hoping I could stop it or that it would go wide. It was hard to tell."

It is certainly not hard to tell, she is one heck of a goalie.
Until next time, just keep watching for the next snowflake and thank goodness, it won't fall today.

Don't be a chicken! Simple steps to carve a turkey with confidence StatePoint - Will you be hosting Thanksgiving dinner this year? Even those with the best mashed potatoes, the tastiest cornbread and the sweetest pie can have reservations about carving the turkey.

Easy tips from the carving experts at Smith's Housewares, a manufacturer of innovative knife sharpeners and kitchen tools, can give you confidence during this final step of feast prep:

- Schedule your turkey to come out of the oven about 20 minutes before you begin carving it. This will make handling the hot turkey easier and give the meat's juices time to redistribute for maximum deliciousness.

- Remove the string first. Then, remove each leg and thigh from the body of the turkey, using your hands to separate, and your knife to slice through the meat.

- Next, separate the thighs from the legs by pulling on a leg and using your knife to slice. Target the 'V' area with your knife, feeling around until you find the joint. Slice the meat away from the thigh bone and place it directly on your serving platter. Next, remove the wings using a similar method. By identifying where the joint is; you can avoid slicing bone.

- Slice each breast slightly off the midline with an even stroke. Gently pull the breast away on the side you've chosen. Slice each breast into quarter inch thick slices. Place on your platter. Alternatively, cut slices of breast directly off the turkey, parallel to the rib cage. Either way, keep slices even on both sides.

• Save time and energy and be safer and neater by using a sharp straightedge knife and a carving fork to steady your meat. This will prevent tearing the meat and making a mess.

• On one of the most important cooking holidays of the year, you'll want to make sure your kitchen is prepped to handle the work. Sharpen all the knives you will need in advance, particularly your turkey carving knife. Give yourself a present early this year by equipping yourself with a compact electric knife sharpener, an essential for everyday use, as well as major feasts. Those from Smith's feature a manual slot for polishing a freshly ground edge or a quick touch-up of already sharp knives. They can be found at walmart.com.

• A true holiday meal should be a feast for all the senses. So, after arranging your carved turkey on the serving platter, use fresh in-season herbs, fruits and vegetables to give your main course extra appeal.

With the right, well-maintained tools and the right technique, carving can be the simplest step of your Turkey Day preparations.

Fall and Thanksgiving menu ideas

StatePoint - This autumn, gather family and friends to celebrate the harvest season and Thanksgiving holiday with a countryside menu filled with rustic farm-fresh fare and delectable wines.

For starters, welcome your guests with a glass of Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot or Zinfandel, wines perfect for the season. Serve hors d'oeuvres of fresh goat cheese with herbs and lemon zest, marinated olives, ci-pollini onion hummus and warm homemade bread. This combination of delicious fall flavors will happily satisfy your guests prior to the main course.

When preparing the main course, embrace the outdoors by firing up the grill to cook the turkey or other meats. This will make room in the oven for scrumptious sides such as fennel baked in cream, apricot and walnut stuffing or winter squash flavored with thyme and sage.

The herbs and spices included in the menu can make choosing a wine difficult. A spicy refined, Zinfandel with a long, silky finish would be a good choice for robust fall flavors. The Reserve Zinfandel 2013 (SRP:$39.99) from St. Francis Winery and Vineyards, features classic structure with aromas of cinnamon, dark mixed berry that merge with flavors of blackberry jam, ripe raspberry and a touch of peppercorn. The winery's luxury line of Reserve wines is certified sustainable, handcrafted and produced in small batches.

"These luscious, elegant, fruit-driven wines complement the many flavors and textures of the holiday table," says Christopher Silva, CEO of St. Francis Winery and Vineyards.

This wine selection can be served with every course of your fall feast, including this seasonal dessert recipe for Pumpkin Panna Cotta by Chef Bryan Jones, who oversees the wine and food pairing program at St. Francis Winery and Vineyards.

Ingredients:

- 1 3/4 cup cream
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon gelatin
- 1 cup milk
- 1 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
- 1/2 cup pumpkin pie mix

Preparation:

- Simmer cream and sugar for 5 minutes.
- Soak the gelatin in the milk a few minutes. Add the bloomed gelatin to the cream mixture. Cook 2-3 minutes.
- Add the pumpkin pie mix and vanilla. Place the mixture in an ice bath and cool to room temperature.
- Pour mixture into six 4-ounce ramekins. Refrigerate until set.

When designing your Thanksgiving menu and other fall celebrations, be inspired by the season's oldest traditions and rely on freshly harvested ingredients and rustic flavors to make your meals memorable.

Spruce up your dining table this Thanksgiving.

The 1996 Grafton flood and the 2016 vote on wind energy

GRAFTON, Vt. - I thank the Grafton Select Board for inviting me to participate in the October 10, Hydrology Forum. The forum was held to inform the public of the hydrologic, storm water, and flooding issues associated with ridgeline wind development.

The topics discussed included the current state of Lowell Kingdom Community Wind's storm water management, as it is prototypical of what to expect in Grafton and Windham.

Another topic proposed for discussion was the 1998 report of the Grafton flood of June 12 and 13, 1996 authored by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) and the impact of storms and the mountains on local flooding. Due to the extent of discussions regarding the Lowell KCW project, time ran out to discuss this report.

The storms of June 12 and 13, 1996 impacted much of the southern Green Mountains, but were especially severe on Stiles Brook, the location of the proposed wind project. The storms and resulting flood had origins in a southwesterly unstable air mass, typical of late spring/summer weather patterns. Movement of this air mass over the ridgelines and mountains to the west of Grafton caused thunderstorms to form as a result of solar heating and "terrain forcing".

In other words, thunderstorms formed over the mountains and ridgelines as a result of the air mass being forced to rise by the terrain. The data collected for the report revealed that eight to nine inches of rain fell over two days. The report concludes that the prediction of storm location is difficult; however, it infers that these storms largely form over the terrain characteristic of the Green Mountains.

Grafton, Windham, or any town located within or around the spine of the Green Mountain range are highly susceptible to such thunderstorms, with runoff draining to the valleys immediately east and west of the mountains. The steep terrain and narrow valleys, as along Stiles Brook and the Saxton River, exacerbate the flood by accelerating and channeling fast flowing waters.

As in the mountainous area of the proposed Windham-Grafton wind project, the largest effective regional storm water management approach with the least need for human intervention is preservation of the forest in these high elevations. In the 2011 ANR report "Resilience, A Report on the Health of Vermont's Environment", the forests of Vermont are credited as "[helping to] intercept many downpours, slowing runoff into streams." So, one can conclude that with human induced climate change the storm water retaining benefits of forests will become even more important going forward.

According to the US Global Change Research Program, between 1958 and 2010 the Northeast experienced more than a 70% increase in high intensity storms. This trend is expected to continue steadily into the future. So then, what is the current administration's answer to addressing climate change?

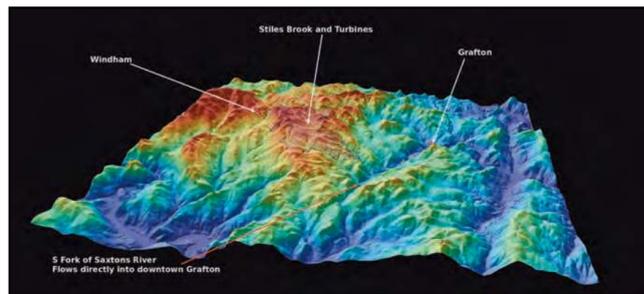

It is to promote large-scale industrial wind energy generation plants in the location where rain falls the hardest and the forests provide the greatest benefit in terms of flood resilience in the downstream valleys. The developers will say that ridgeline development is a must as "that is where the wind is"; but its not as simple as planting 400-500 foot tall wind turbines.

In order to build the project, mountainous terrain must be blasted and graded to develop the roads to provide access of trucks and cranes to these high elevations. The natural hydrology is interrupted and redirected, with tens of acres of imperious cover created. To compensate for this change in the natural runoff patterns the Stiles Brook project would contain upwards of 50 plus structural storm water management facilities that would require maintenance in perpetuity.

If these systems fail due to insufficient design or construction, lack of maintenance or poor siting, storm water runoff from the site will increase significantly.

Contrary to others' position at the forum, it is my professional opinion based on my understanding of stormwater management design, review of the plans and calculations for the project, direct observation of the site, review of aerial imagery, and photographs provided by others, that the Lowell KCW project's stormwater systems are not functioning to protect downstream resources.

In the best interest of Grafton and Windham, fighting climate change without sacrificing resiliency is better solved with preserving the high elevation forests and building more community scale solar voltaic systems in close proximity and under the control of the residents. That, my friends, would be setting an example for other towns in Vermont...and the world.

This commentary is by Geoffrey M. Goll, who is a founding and managing partner of Princeton Hydro and a 26-year engineer who has been working on renewable energy issues in Vermont for the past six years. He was an expert witness for Energize Vermont during the storm water and wetland permit appeals of the Kingdom County Wind project in front of the Vermont Public Service Board.

Wheels for Warmth recycles 2,500 unusable tires

REGION - Vermont's "Wheels for Warmth" program is ready to roll out heating assistance funds for this winter, thanks to its 12th consecutive year of strong community support. Preliminary numbers for 2016 show the program collected a total of $52,000 for emergency fuel assistance programs, sold 2,250 safe tires, and recycled 2,500 donated, unusable tires.

Two sale locations at Dubois Construction in Middlesex and Casella Construction in Mendon, along with 13 tire drop-off locations, made it possible for more Vermonters to take part in the program. People started lining up at both sale sites well before dawn on October 29 to find safe, affordable winter tires.

Proceeds from both sales benefit heating assistance programs at community action agencies around the state, such as Capstone Community Action, BROCC Community Action in Southwestern Vermont, Champlain Valley Office of Economic Opportunity in Northwestern Vermont, and Northeast Kingdom Community Action.

Donated tires were inspected by Department of Motor Vehicle officers, and those deemed safe were sold for a maximum of $25 each on Oct. 29. Tires not meeting standards were recycled through Casella Waste Management. Casella donates 100 percent of the $4 recycling fee to home heating programs.

"Every year I'm humbled by the community of volunteers who come together to make this event possible," said Lt. Governor Phil Scott. "They give whatever they can so that 'Wheels for Warmth' can continue to keep Vermonters safe and warm through the winter. The only sad part - and I feel this every year - is that there aren't enough tires for everyone who needs them. But that's what drives us to keep doing this year after year, and we will be back next October ready to help even more."

Since Lt. Gov. Scott established the program, "Wheels for Warmth" has raised $365,000 for emergency fuel assistance, put back into use 16,950 safe, donated tires, and recycled more than 27,869 unusable tires.

"Wheels for Warmth" would not be possible without the generosity of: Casella Waste Systems, Bond Auto, Vianor Tire, WDEV/Radio Vermont Group, VSECU (Vermont State Employees Credit Union), Jet Service Envelope, Associated General Contractors, Dubois Construction, Casella Construction, Inc., Newton Construction, Village Grocery, Dick Mazza's Store, Maplewood LTD, Chip Percy and the Percy Crew, OMYA, Pete's Tire, Accura Printing, Capitol Grounds, Booth Brothers Dairy, McGullicuddy's Irish Pub, 94.5 "The Drive," Best Western Inn and Suites, Vermont Department of Motor Vehicles, ADA Traffic Control, and WorkSafe. With their help, all costs associated with promoting and implementing "Wheels for Warmth" are covered without using program funds.

THUR., NOV. 10 - SPRINGFIELD, Vt. - Bring a bag lunch and join Library Director, Amy Howlett and fellow readers to discuss Ernest Shackleton's Antarctic expedition 1914-1916., November 10 from 6 - 7 p.m. This event is part of the ongoing Vermont Reads program at the library this fall. Caroline Alexander's The Endurance: Shackleton's Legendary Antarctic Expedition - the epic survival story of Ernest Shackleton and his twenty-seven man crew at the dawn of WWI. imagined traveling in an ancient and time-honored way behind a team of traditional sled dogs? Come to the Springfield Town Library and listen to Kathy Bennett and her husband Alex MacLennan of Braeburn Siberians, with one of their Siberian huskies, sharing the joys of dog sledding in Vermont. Dog Sledding with Braeburn Siberians will be held at the Springfield Town Library on Monday, November 14 at 6:30 p.m. This event is free, accessible to people with disabilities, and open to the public. WEDNESDAY, NOV. 16 - ROCKINGHAM, Vt. - At 6:30 p.m., the Community Asylum Seekers Project will discuss "Seeking Asylum: What Does It Mean?" Refugees are in the news, but who are the people who come to the United States to seek asylum, and why do they come? This presentation will explain the difference between refugees and asylum seekers, and will describe the work that the Community Asylum Seekers Project (CASP) is doing locally, and ways you might choose to be involved. The highlight of the evening will be the personal tale of an asylum seeker, as local resident Atilio Barrera recounts the danger that caused him to flee his native Peru in 1979 along with his wife and infant son, the reception they received in the United States, and their eventual success in building a life here. This event is free and open to the public. For more information, call (802) 463-4270, go to www.rockinghamlibrary.org or stop by the library at 65 Westminster St. in Bellows Falls.

These tactics work for all writers - no matter what you write, your age, or stage in the writing game. Registration for this workshop is recommended. This workshop is free and open to the public. To register or for more information, call (802) 463-4270, go to www.rockinghamlibrary.org or stop by the library at 65 Westminster St. in Bellows Falls.

son that begins November 12 and ends Sunday, November 27 are being asked to help gather biological data.

Hunters who get a deer on opening weekend of rifle season can help Vermont's deer management program by reporting their deer.

Biologists are collecting middle incisor teeth from November season deer in order to evaluate regional differences in ages and antler characteristics of bucks as well as to help estimate population size, growth rate, health, and mortality rates. Each tooth will be cross-sectioned to accurately determine the deer's age, and the results will be posted on the Fish & Wildlife website next spring.

Hunters who don't make it to a biological reporting station are asked to obtain a tooth envelope from their regular reporting agent. Write your name, Conservation ID number and date of kill on the envelope. Remove one of the middle incisor teeth, being careful to include the root. Place the tooth in the envelope and give it to the reporting agent.

"Information about the ages of deer in the population is critically important, and more information allows us to make better management decisions," said Vermont Fish & Wildlife's Deer Project Leader Nick Fortin. "To get accurate population estimates, and to better assess our current management strategies, we really need to get teeth from as many deer as possible."

The department is also asking hunters to keep the antlers from their deer at home so they can be examined by Fish & Wildlife personnel after the deer season in order to collect additional biological data on antler development.
