LTE: Thanks to Ludlow Fire Department for rescuing our horse —

Dear Editor,

I and my wife are writing to express our appreciation to the Ludlow fire department, especially the three members who, early on the morning of Saturday, Jan. 3, rescued our horse Riffy.

Riffy was down in her stall, unable to rise from the floor. She is 31, and had this problem a month ago. My wife and I were able to coax her up, and for the past month she was fine. However, that morning the exact same thing happened, but we were unable to get her up. After failing, I called 911, and a wonderful dispatcher connected me to the Ludlow Fire Department. The three men worked hard and creatively for two hours, attempting many tries, and then successfully extricated her from the stall and got her standing, and then outside into the paddock.

It was a tremendous effort, for Riffy is a Norwegian fjord, a heavy breed weighing nearly 1,000 pounds. Compounding the matter was these guys were called around 6 a.m., and continued to work until after 8 a.m., while it was still

JULY 16 — Remembering Ron Patch

CHESTER, Vt. — Ron Patch has joined his ancestors. Ron was a true Vermonter and Chester native, who dressed in casual attire, such as a flannel shirt and worn-in jeans, and in the more recent years, long hair. He preferred to be barefoot, and has been caught at festivals or mowing his lawn without shoes on. He spoke and wrote with Vermont phrases and idioms, which no one will quite be able to replace.

JULY 21 — Londonderry STR ordinance disapproval vote fails

LONDONDERRY, Vt. — Selectboard Chair Tom Cavanagh announced that, "The petition to disapprove the short-term rental ordinance amendments failed by a vote of 66 to 25," which was voted on the floor at the special town meeting. With this vote, the town approved the amended STR ordinance, and it is now in effect.

AUG. 5 — Ludlow residents voice opinions on food truck ordinance

LUDLOW, Vt. — The Ludlow Village Trustees held a public hearing on their proposed food truck ordinance on Tuesday, Aug. 5. A number of Ludlow residents came out to voice their support for or opposition to the ordinance. The newly proposed ordinance would have imposed a $100 per day fee on food trucks in the Village of Ludlow, as well as a 30-day limit per year, effectively limiting food trucks in the village to special events or short stays.

Ludlow.

AUG. 12 — Rockingham residents report reckless riders

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt. — Resident John Horrocks said, "I'd like to know when the town is going to do something about these children running motorized vehicles through the town. Someone's going to get hurt." Horrocks pointed out that nonmotorized bicycle riders are required to know hand signals and follow the rules of the road, saying this situation should be no different. Selectboard Chair Peter Golec concurred, adding that he'd seen some young people riding electric scooters and bikes at high speeds on downtown sidewalks.

AUG. 15 — Plymouth Route 100A bridge re-opens

PLYMOUTH, Vt. — The bridge was scheduled for a 42-day closure, which began on July 7, and was anticipated to reopen on Aug. 18. Selectboard member Rick Kaminski advocated for the construction crews, "They are very organized, hardworking...from what I can see, they're doing really well." The bridge was reopened on Friday, Aug. 15.

PROCTORSVILLE, Vt. — The tradition of the honey festival in Proctorsville started more than 10 years ago, and 2024 marked the last year for the popular event held at the Golden Stage Inn. But, as September approached, a collective whisper of lingering interest began to circulate among town and village residents, and local businesses, who wanted to keep the cheerful little festival alive.

CLAREMONT, N.H. — On Saturday, Sept. 20, Mother Nature could not have conjured up a better autumn day to help celebrate the 11th annual Kiwanis Brewfest, held at the Visitor Center Green in downtown Claremont. By way of explanation, McNamara said, "[My resignation] has more to do with a self-reflection and career change, it has nothing to do with the town and village of Ludlow, which I do, and still do, care very deeply about." This was met with a round of applause from those present.

OCT. 6 - Springfield Selectboard okays Wall Street one-way

SPRINGFIELD, Vt. - A public hearing was held prior to the Oct. 6 regular meeting of the Springfield Selectboard, for the purpose of reviewing an ordinance amendment regarding a one-way traffic proposal for Wall Street. Town manager Jeff Mabus reassured residents that the town was planning to

OCT. 8 - Claremont City Council makes changes to veterans benefits

CLAREMONT, N.H. - Statute RSA 235 was passed, effective April 1, which eliminates the stacking of the standard veterans credit of $500 with the $1,400 credit for total and permanently disabled veterans. These two benefits can no longer be combined. That is why it was proposed that the total and permanently disable veterans tax credit should be increased to $1,900. The council approved this ordinance. Hamilton then requested that the elderly tax exemption be increased 3%, to reflect a 3% increase in inflation. Likewise, Hamilton requested that the disabled tax exemption be increased by 3%, which the council approved.

First Baptist Church receives Widow's Mite Award

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt. — The First Baptist Church of Bellows Falls has been honored with the prestigious Widow's Mite Award by the American Baptist Churches U.S.A. Presented by the Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board (MMBB), this award recognizes churches for exceptional generosity, measured not by the size of the congregation, but by the percentage of their budget dedicated to mission and ministry, and the consistency of that giving year after year.

The Widow's Mite Award is rooted in the Gospel story from Luke 21:1-4, in which a widow offers "two very small copper coins," giving all that she had. The award also commemorates an inspiring act of sacrificial generosity in 1981, when a Vietnamese woman worshipping with the First Chinese Baptist Church of Fresno, Calif., unaware of the purpose of the offering, placed her wristwatch, her only possession of value, into the offering envelope. Presented annually, the award includes national recognition by ABCUSA, and the presentation of an engraved engrossment to the recipient church.

This honor is especially significant for the First Baptist Church of Bellows Falls, a small congregation that consistently gives more than 30% of its annual budget to serve others both locally and abroad. Through monthly mission offerings, support of American Baptist Churches ministries, and partnerships with local and foreign missions, the church demonstrates a vibrant commitment to living out its faith through generosity.

This ministry is one of several mission-focused efforts supported by the First Baptist Church of Bel-

HCRS announces new CFO Sarah Truckle

SPRINGFIELD, Vt. — Health Care and Rehabilitation Services (HCRS), southeastern Vermont's nonprofit community mental health agency, appointed Sarah Truckle as chief financial officer, overseeing the organization's financial operations following a planned leadership transition.

Truckle joined HCRS in September 2025, allowing for a thoughtful and informed transition. She is responsible for leading all financial functions across the agency, including budgeting, forecasting, accounting, billing, and facilities operations. Her role supports long-term sustainability, regulatory compliance, and strategic growth as HCRS continues to expand services across southeastern Vermont.

With nearly 15 years of financial leadership experience, Truckle brings expertise across government, higher education, and non-profit human services. Prior to joining HCRS, she held key financial and operational roles within Vermont's Agency of Human Services, and later supported the Vermont State Colleges System, where she contributed to strengthening public higher education through sound financial management.

"Sarah brings a thoughtful, steady approach to financial leadership, and a deep understanding of complex systems," said George Karabakakis, chief executive officer of HCRS. "Her experience and perspective position HCRS well as we continue to grow and respond to evolving funding systems and community needs."

This leadership transition follows the retirement of Hal Moore, who concluded more than 20 years of service to HCRS on Dec. 19. Moore joined the organization in 2004 as controller and was promoted to chief financial officer in 2006. During his tenure, HCRS grew from an annual budget of approximately $23 million to more than $68 million, expanding programs, staff, and infrastructure across the region.

As CFO, Moore played a key role in strengthening the organization's financial stability. His career reflects a broad background in accounting and finance, including service in both non-profit and for-profit sectors.

"Hal's leadership has been foundational to HCRS' long-term stability," Karabakakis added. "We are deeply grateful for his years of service, guidance, and commitment to fiscal responsibility."

HCRS thanks Moore for his decades of dedication and leadership, and looks ahead with confidence as Truckle continues to guide the organization's financial operations.

2026 housing market predictions —

REGION — The housing market was a tough go for many buyers and sellers this past year, but 2026 should usher in a healthier, more balanced market with improved affordability, more choices, and price relief for renters saving for down payments, according to Zillow economists' predictions.

Modest rise in home prices

After a year of mostly flat growth, home values are predicted to rise a modest 1.2% in 2026. Of course, local markets have their own dynamics, and some markets will lose value while others see larger price growth. The economists predict 12 major markets will see price declines this year, half the number that experienced price drops in 2025. Prices in the South are expected to see the biggest bounce-back.

For buyers, the modest price growth could make saving for a down payment easier, and improve affordability, especially if wage growth continues to outpace the rise in prices. For sellers, the price trend could mean more stable pricing strategies, and more consistent buyer demand for well-priced and well-marketed homes.

As affordability improves for buyers, and more sellers list their homes for sale in 2026, economists expect competition to pick up.

Relatively steady mortgage rates

Forecasting mortgage rates is notoriously hard, even for the experts. But economists can look at some guideposts like inflation to see where things might end up. To that end, Zillow economists have a good track record of predicting inflation related to housing, which makes up 40% of the consumer price index. Given that track record, Zillow economists predict that mortgage rates will likely stay above 6% in 2026. Lower rates in 2025 helped push affordability to a three-year high, and further rate moderation should help more buyers as they look for homes in 2026.

Tiny rise in apartment rents

Thanks to a boom in multifamily construction, apartment rents should stay essentially flat in most of the country, with minuscule growth of 0.3% predicted for 2026. One exception is New York City, which has sky-high home prices and a chronic shortage of rental housing that keeps rents high. Buying in the city isn't expected to get any cheaper, which means that rental demand will remain high, and rents are expected to accelerate next year.

People renting single-family homes aren't expected to fare as well as apartment dwellers. Rents nationally for single family homes are projected to climb by 2.3% as potential buyers continue to rent longer.

More incentives for buyers

With a large pipeline of new homes already built or under construction, builders have limited incentives to continue building at the same clip in 2026. With high construction costs, both in financing and materials, and a stagnant labor market that has curbed the main reason people move, i.e., jobs, fewer new homes are expected to hit the market. The upside for buyers is that builder incentives, such as interest rate buy-downs, could become more common, especially in areas where affordability remains challenging.

Kid-friendly rentals

The growing share of families with children who rent their homes will mean more buildings will be vying to attract them with family-friendly amenities such as "imagination centers" or "homework pods," economists predict. Renters with kids under 18 account for 37% of renters, a 4% increase from the 33% who rented a year ago, according to the Zillow Consumer Housing Trends Report.

Money-saving home features

The rising costs of running a home will continue to influence home trends in 2026. Think energy-efficient features like whole-home battery storage, electric vehicle charging stations, and so-called "zero-energy" homes that produce as much renewable energy as they consume, resulting in lower energy bills.

More homes also will be outfitted with things like cold zones for bulk storage and refrigerated drawers to help families capitalize on money-saving strategies and cut waste by keeping food fresh longer.

Artificial intelligence

Artificial intelligence (AI) is expected to remove more of the friction in housing transactions, morphing from advisor to manager in 2026. For example, instead of recommending actions, AI will help connect buyers and sellers with the right real estate agents, schedule tours, and facilitate negotiations and closing preparations. By automating routine actions and streamlining, the economists predict that AI will help bring more predictability and sharper decision-making to real estate transactions.

Dear Editor,

As we enter the upcoming legislative session, Vermonters are sending us a clear message: Affordability must be front and center. Families, seniors, farmers, and small businesses are all feeling the strain of rising costs, and they expect their elected leaders to respond with practical, responsible solutions. That is both our challenge and our obligation.

Education will rightly dominate much of the conversation. Vermont's commitment to high-quality public education is non-negotiable, but so is the need to rein in property taxes that are pushing many residents to the brink. Educational transformation must be done thoughtfully and reasonably. Lowering property taxes cannot come at the expense of educational standards – in fact, our goal should be to strengthen outcomes for students.

Achieving that balance will require honest discussions about reform. That includes examining how we deliver special education services, and whether targeted consolidation can reduce administrative costs while preserving strong local schools. These are not easy conversations, but they are necessary if we are serious about affordability and excellence.

Health care is another major driver of costs in Vermont, and it intersects directly with education and the broader economy. School budgets are increasingly burdened by health care expenses, and families are struggling with premiums, deductibles, and out-of-pocket costs. Vermont currently has the highest health care costs in the nation, while just across the river New Hampshire has the lowest. That disparity is untenable. We must take a hard look at what is driving costs here, and pursue reforms that deliver quality care without breaking household budgets.

Housing will also be a central focus this session. Vermont simply does not have enough housing at any level. We need more inventory across the spectrum, from workforce housing, to starter homes, to options for seniors. Without bold but sensible action, housing shortages will continue to undermine affordability, workforce recruitment, and economic growth in every region of the state.

As vice chair of the Senate Agriculture Committee, I have seen firsthand the immense pressure Vermont farmers are under. Climate change, workforce shortages – particularly related to immigration – and shrinking profit margins are threatening the viability of family farms. Supporting agriculture is not just about preserving a way of life; it is an economic imperative.

Farming maintains the working landscape that draws roughly 15.8 million visitors to Vermont each year, fueling a $4 billion tourism industry. Agriculture is also foundational to our manufacturing sector. Food manufacturing is Vermont's second-largest manufacturing subsector, and the dairy industry alone generates more than $2.2 billion in total economic activity when processing and distribution are included. When farmers struggle, the ripple effects are felt statewide.

There is a lot to do this session, and no single policy will solve all of Vermont's challenges. But Vermonters have entrusted us with a clear mission: Make their lives more affordable, more stable, and more hopeful. We do not have the luxury of delay or division. We must confront tough issues honestly, work collaboratively, and focus relentlessly on results.

Affordability must be our north star. The choices we make this session will shape Vermont's future for years to come – and we have no choice but to get it right.

Sincerely,
Sen. Joe Major

Elaine A. Davis, 1945-2025

ATHENS, Vt. — With deep sadness, we announce that Elaine Anne (Fletcher) Davis, lovingly known as "Meme," "Mom," and "Lainey," 80, of Athens, Vt., passed away on Dec. 23, 2025, surrounded by her family. She faced her battle with cancer with extraordinary strength, resilience, and grace — never once losing her quiet courage or her unwavering faith.

Elaine was born on Nov. 11, 1945, to Robert and Cora (Perry) Fletcher. She grew up in Athens, Vt., where she learned early the values she carried throughout her life: family first, work hard, love deeply, and believe in God. She attended local schools, and later graduated from Bellows Falls High School, Class of 1963.

Elaine married Elmer Davis Jr. on July 11, 1998, after meeting at the Putney Paper Mill, where they worked together. They shared a devoted and joyful life for 28 years, filled with love, laughter, and family.

She is survived by her husband Elmer; her brother Joseph Fletcher; and her children Ervin (Carrie) Snide Jr., Duane (Sheila) Snide, and Joanne (Jon) Parker. She also leaves behind 10 grandchildren, 15 great-grandchildren, and many extended family members and friends who loved her dearly. She was predeceased by her parents and her daughter Jacqueline Snide.

Elaine's greatest devotion in life was to her family. She was a woman of deep generosity and endless compassion. She always put others before herself, and gave freely of her time, her love, and her presence. She loved simple joys: a good yard sale, an afternoon of shopping, country music, going to the fair, and spending time with the people she loved most. Elaine had a gift for bringing warmth and kindness wherever she went. She remembered every birthday, every milestone, and made every card personal. To know her was to feel seen, cared for, and welcomed. Her legacy of love will live on in every life she touched.

Her faith carried her through every season of life, and was a steadfast source of strength. She found peace in knowing she would be healed and at home in heaven, reunited with loved ones, and held in God's embrace. That faith now brings us comfort as we picture her whole, joyful, and surrounded by light.

The family wishes to extend their heartfelt gratitude to the Jack Byrne Center for Palliative & Hospice Care at Dartmouth Hitchcock. Their compassion, tenderness, and unwavering support held our entire family in ways we will never forget. We are forever grateful for the way they cared for Elaine with dignity and love during such a difficult time.

A memorial service will be held on Jan. 10, at 1 p.m., at the Community Christian Church in Athens, Vt., followed by a Celebration of Life, where stories, laughter, and memories will be shared, just as Elaine would have wanted.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the Jack Byrne Center for Palliative & Hospice Care at Dartmouth Hitchcock, in honor of the comfort and compassion shown to Elaine and her family.

Our hearts ache with her absence, yet they overflow with gratitude for the love she gave. We will miss her voice, her warmth, and her presence, but she lives on in all of us — in every hug, every act of kindness, and every moment of grace.

Until we meet again, Meme. We love you endlessly.

Arrangements have been entrusted to the care of the Fenton and Hennessey Funeral Home, 55 Westminster Street, Bellows Falls, Vt.

Heather J. LaComb, 1982-2025

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt. — Heather Jewel (Dunn) LaComb, 43, passed away suddenly on Dec. 21, 2025, the day of the winter solstice, due to a brain aneurysm. Heather's passing came far too soon, and has left an immeasurable void in the hearts of all who knew and loved her.

Heather was born on Dec. 7, 1982. She was preceded in death by her parents Paula A. Dunn and Gary Dunn, both of Bellows Falls, Vt.

She is survived by her beloved children Spencer LaComb and Makenzie LaComb, of Springfield, Vt., who were the center of her world, and her greatest source of pride. Heather was a devoted and loving mother, whose life revolved around providing, supporting, and encouraging her children to become the best versions of themselves.

Heather is also survived by her sister Sara A. Dunn and Sara's husband Keith Thayer, of Perkinsville, Vt.; her longtime partner Shawn Rice, of Westminster, Vt.; and many extended family members, friends, and coworkers who were touched by her kindness and quiet strength.

Heather was a longtime and dedicated employee of Shaw's in Walpole, N.H., where she was known as a dependable, hardworking, and caring colleague. In addition to her work, Heather was actively pursuing a degree in business management, demonstrating her determination to better her future, and provide stability and opportunity for her family. Those who knew Heather knew her as gentle, thoughtful, and deeply devoted to the people she loved. She carried herself with humility, resilience, and a steady compassion that did not seek attention, but left a lasting impact.

Heather's passing on the winter solstice holds special meaning. The solstice marks the longest night of the year, but also the turning point, when light slowly begins to return. In this way, Heather's life and legacy remain a reminder that even in the deepest darkness, love, hope, and light endure.

Heather will be forever remembered for her devotion to her children, her unwavering work ethic, and the love she gave so freely to those closest to her. Her memory will live on through Spencer and Makenzie, and in the hearts of all who were fortunate enough to know her.

Service details will be shared at a later date.

Arrangements have been entrusted to the care of the Fenton and Hennessey Funeral Home, 55 Westminster Street, Bellows Falls, Vt.

Girls on the Run Vermont coach registration open

REGION – Coach registration is officially open for Girls on the Run Vermont's (GOTRVT) spring 2026 season. The programs are specifically designed for third grade through eighth grade girls and gender-expansive youth. Prior running experience is not necessary for coaches or participants.

Volunteer coaches lead teams through lessons twice a week, covering topics that help participants learn more about themselves, become independent and critical thinkers, develop skills to make healthy choices, find inner strength through physical activity, and learn ways to be active in their community. Girls on the Run Vermont provides coaches with comprehensive training, a curriculum that maps out each lesson, and supplies and support for an enriching season. Coaches facilitate 20 impactful lessons spanning the ten-week season, with two lessons a week. Lesson days are determined by each coaching team.

Coach registration is open now at www.gotrvt.org/coach. Statewide participant registration opens on Wednesday, Feb. 18, and the season begins the week of March 16. A participant interest form can be completed now at www.tinyurl.com/

All-star lineup at Bellows Falls Opera House

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt. — Four of the brightest lights in contemporary singer/songwriter music — John Gorka, Patty Larkin, Cliff Eberhardt, and Lucy Kapansky — join together for an extraordinary evening of music, “On a Winter’s Night,” on Thursday, Jan. 8, at the Bellows Falls Opera House.

It was in 1994 that folk-music den-mother Christine Lavin first gathered a group together for a song-writing and performing retreat under that moniker. From that, a best-selling Rounder Records disc appeared, then a tour, then another. 30 years later, “On a Winter’s Night” is one of the most anticipated annual events on the folk-music calendar.

says Charlie Hunter, one of the presenters of the event, “except without the mosquitoes and tick bites, and you’re in a comfortable seat, and you don’t have to use a porta-potty.”

“Seriously, though,” he continues, “this is just a really great lineup of writers and performers whose work has stood the test of time.”

The Jan. 8 date marks the first of the 2026 Ray Massucco Concert Series, named after the late beloved Bellows Falls booster, attorney, part-time concert promoter, and full-time music lover. After Massucco’s death in 2022, a group of Vermont friends who had worked with Massucco on the 22-year trajectory of the Roots on the River music festival quickly coalesced around the idea of a concert series. “Ray loved music,” says Ezra Veitch, production manager of Ray’s the Roof, presenter of the series. “And Ray loved Bellows Falls. I think he’d be thrilled to see how successful the series has been and continues to be.”

The 2026 series kicks off with “On a Winter’s Night”; continues on April 17 with the return of Garrison Keillor, this time accompanied by longtime Prairie Home Companion pianist Richard Dworsky; revs into high gear with the return of Fred Eaglesmith on Oct. 17; and concludes with Dar Williams, on Dec. 4.

The Bellows Falls Opera House is located at 7 Village Square, Bellows Falls, Vt. Doors will open at 6:30 p.m., and showtime is 7:30 p.m. Tickets and more information can be found at www.bellowsfallsoperahouse.com/special-events.

Spaulding is an expert in underwater archaeology and history, with more than 35 years of experience and over 3,400 dives in numerous countries and throughout New England. Her work includes major historic discoveries in rivers and lakes, featured in PBS and National Geographic documentaries. She played a significant role in improving the Connecticut River, now an American Heritage River with more than 20 feet of visibility. The Connecticut River is one of her favorite places to dive, and she has made many historical and archaeological discoveries there. She is a dedicated member of numerous non-profit conservation and research organizations, including as a trustee for the Connecticut River Conservancy, and a board member and volunteer for the Bellows Falls Historical Society, managing the Riverfront Park and volunteering as a docent in the 46 Canal Street museum.
