Celebrating 35 years of tacos and traditions

BY PAULA BENSON
The Vermont Journal

LUDLOW, Vt. – As the saying goes, “If you know, you know,” and those in the know are heaping praise on Ludlow’s Tacos Tacos like owner Lauren Nazzaro heaps shredded chicken into her massive burritos.

In an online review, one customer commented, “The burrito was big, delicious, and filling. Lived in Texas for 20 years and these felt like something you would get at a small taqueria down there!”

“I wish I had a picture of the burrito that I ate so fast it almost made my head spin,” wrote another reviewer.

The restaurant’s loyal customers appreciate the portion sizes, affordable pricing, quality, quick service, and the variety of vegetarian and vegan options. In addition to the popular, famously large burritos, Tacos Tacos serves tacos – obviously – nachos, and salads. For dessert, a cream-filled churro brings a cool finish to the meal.

When Tacos Tacos first opened in Ludlow, in April of 1991, the owners were Kevin Lefter and John Early. They had previously opened the flagship restaurant in Nantucket, which stayed open until 2023. A third Tacos Tacos in Rutland was attempted, but ultimately shut down.

The original owners introduced the gun-toting, mustachioed bandito logo that still adorns the merchandise, and whom Nazzaro lovingly calls “Paco.” Nazzaro related that when she first signed the ownership papers in 2018, she gave her lawyer the business information over the phone and when the documents came back, everywhere the name appeared, it was written as “Paco’s Tacos.”

Nazzaro and her right-hand man Nick Arduini, who she says motivates her by being “the gentlest bully you will ever meet,” have kept the business going through a pandemic and a flood. Now they collaborate on how best to keep costs down as the price of ingredients and supplies is going up, among other things.

Arduini worked at Tacos Tacos before Nazzaro bought it, and taught her some of the tricks of the taco trade. Tom and Holly Ellis were the shop’s owners at that time, and wanted to retire.

In a twist of fate, Nazzaro’s uncle Ben lived next door to the Ellises in Plymouth, and when he learned they were selling the business, he told them about his niece who had been working in the restaurant business for years. Nazzaro said once she and Holly Ellis met and had gotten to know one another, Ellis basically insisted Nazzaro take over the business and offered to help figure out how to make it work.

Her uncle unfortunately passed away before Nazzaro made the move to Vermont, but Ellis reached out, and eventually they made a deal. Ellis handed down the original recipes, and Nazzaro admits she has changed very little since then.

Another magical coincidence occurred when Nazzaro and Ellis were finalizing the contract. Nazzaro had left her jacket behind after a meeting with Ellis, with a pin attached that had been her grandmother Alice’s – a handcrafted angel pin.

When Nazzaro returned to retrieve the jacket, Ellis asked her, “Where did you get this pin?”

“It was from my grandmother,” Nazzaro replied.

“I gave that pin to your grandmother for Christmas many years back,” Ellis remarked. “It was this moment of ‘This is where you are meant to be, this is what is supposed to happen,’” said Nazzaro.

Additionally, the money Nazzaro was using to buy Tacos Tacos had been left to her by her grandmother, which she had earned by owning her own restaurant, Benny’s Den, in Connecticut, for 30 years.

The tradition continues in many ways for Nazzaro, who had been about 10 when visiting Okemo and stopping at Tacos Tacos for a burrito; now her 10-year-old daughter, Aurora, accompanies her.

“We ski, then come down off the mountain and we eat our well-earned burritos,” said Nazzaro, relaying that this tradition is shared by many families who visit the area.

The restaurant received a makeover after Nazzaro came on; the muted murals were replaced with vibrant colors associated with Mexican culture and celebration. Nazzaro created a line of Tacos Tacos hot sauces, including “Ghost Chile” and “Caribbean Lime.”

With an easy smile and genuine laugh, Nazzaro brings a friendly, welcoming energy to the shop. A neon sign hangs in the window that reads, “Inhale tacos. Exhale negativity.”

With five or six staffers and a small kitchen with a two-burner stove, Tacos Tacos is still able to stay open all season, seven days per week, 11 a.m. – 8 p.m. In the warmer months, outdoor seating will be ready – two picnic tables on the lawn in front, and tables on the deck beneath a set of festive string lights.

Tacos Tacos will also be teaming up with Darkside Snowboards for their fourth Taco & Skateboard contest at the Okemo Skate Park. There will be prizes given out in different categories, and free tacos for all participants.

The original “burrito hotline” remains open for business – 35 years and still going strong, serving the “best burritos outside the baja,” at 1 Lamere Square.

Chester Andover Family Center receives grant

CHESTER, Vt. – The Chester Andover Family Center (CAFC) is pleased to announce that it has been awarded a $3,000 EpicPromise cash grant from Vail and Okemo Mountain Resort.

The grant funds will be used to support the Chester-Andover Family Center Food Shelf Recipe Kit Initiative. Volunteers work with the food shelf manager to determine what produce and shelf-stable foods will be in abundance each month, then develop and test recipes using the available items.

The recipe kits are available to food shelf recipients once per month. Each recipe kit includes a volunteer-tested recipe for a main dish featuring fresh produce and shelf-stable food items. Our goal is to incorporate and introduce food shelf recipients to unfamiliar produce, such as daikon radishes. Sometimes there is a shelf-stable item that no one is selecting from the shelves. That usually indicates recipients are not sure how to prepare or incorporate it into their weekly meals. That’s when our volunteers get creative. For example, one month we had ramen noodles sitting in our storeroom. We experimented and arrived at a delicious “cold toasted ramen salad” with fresh vegetables and a spicy dressing. Everyone loved it, and ramen noodles started flying out the door.

Each recipe kit includes a detailed recipe listing the ingredients and explicit cooking instructions. Additionally, the kit includes all the ingredients needed for the recipe, including spices. The recipes also contain information for safe food handling. We want to ensure every participant a successful and delicious food experience.

We know the cost of food is going up, and people are reluctant to try unfamiliar food items. Thanks to this generous grant, the Chester-Andover Food Shelf can provide a special, new food experience for our recipients every month. Food shelf recipients tell us they look forward to the recipe kits because they provide a different cooking and meal experience every month.

If you would like to volunteer to help with the recipe kit initiative, stop in or call the food shelf. A volunteer will put you in touch with the recipe kit team.

Ludlow Rotary supporting Pine Ridge

LUDLOW, Vt. – Every year, the Ludlow Rotary Club provides support to families and organizations in our service area, which includes Ludlow, Mount Holly, Plymouth, and Cavendish. In addition, we support programs nationally and internationally, as part of Rotary International’s mission to make a difference not only locally, but in the world.

This year, District 7870, of which Ludlow is a part, has accepted the challenge of a service project that will help families far away from the Green Mountains of Vermont. The Ludlow Rotary Club will be collecting back-to-school supplies for the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota. The Pine Ridge Reservation, home to the Oglala Lakota Nation in southwestern South Dakota, spans 1.7 million acres. It is known for profound cultural resilience and deep historical significance, including the Wounded Knee Massacre site. However, the region faces severe challenges, consistently ranking among the poorest areas in the U.S., with very high unemployment, low life expectancy (approximately 66 years), and significant infrastructure shortages.

Schools often lack funding for basic fall school supplies, something which families simply cannot afford. We are asking the community to help us collect items

Cavendish Green Up Day

CAVENDISH, Vt. – Green Up Day has been held annually each spring since 1970. Fifty years later, the event continues, with tens of thousands of volunteers collecting hundreds of tons of trash annually from roadsides and waterways.

You can sign up now for Cavendish Green Up Day and claim your road in the entryway of the Cavendish Town Office. The door is open 24/7. Sign up by April 15 and get a Green Up T-shirt, or meet up on the Proctorsville Green, Saturday, May 2, between 8:30 and 10:30 a.m.

We will meet back on the Green for a cookout and drinks, from 11:30 a.m. – 1 p.m. Keep returnables in a separate bag, and bring them back to the Green. They will go to the nonprofits Cavendish Streetscapes and the Cavendish Community Conservation Association.

Be safe on Green Up Day. Parents or an adult should accompany elementary school children. Tie your bags and bring them to the transfer station on Saturday.

Work your road facing traffic, up one side and down the other. Wear long pants and check for ticks. If you see a needle or sharp material, find an adult, put it in a thick, sturdy container, and place the container in regular trash.

Report your trash stats; fill out the questionnaire at the cook out. Most unusual find? Most repetitive item? Anything large left at the side of the road? Too big to manage? Let us know and it will be picked up.

Can't make Green Up Day? You may start early or pick up trash through May 10. Bring your trash in a green bag to the transfer station.

For more information, contact Betty McEnaney at 802-236-7099, betty@gotvermont.com, or cavendishcommunityconservation@gmail.com.

Okemo Valley Women's Club

LUDLOW, Vt. – The General Federation of Women's Clubs (GFWC) Okemo Valley Women's Club (OVWC) held their March meeting on Monday, March 9. Twenty-five women were in attendance, including one member by Zoom and a guest.

The speaker for the meeting was Rhonda Lathrop, wealth management advisor for Merrill Lynch. Her presentation was titled "Retain Your Brain," which was directed at ways to create and retain healthy habits to keep ourselves and our brains healthy for a lifetime. Lathrop presented several suggestions for physical and mental activities to help keep our bodies and brains young, and explained how foods can affect mental health and reduce risk of dementia. She suggested learning new things, changing one's perspective to reduce stress, finding challenges, maintaining an active lifestyle, and practicing learning and memorizing. She discussed making exercise a habit, managing stress, and planning for future health care.

After Lathrop's enlightening presentation, the club was treated to St. Patrick's Day-themed snacks and beverages, then moved on to their business meeting. The club discussed scholarships and eligibility parameters, and will hear from the scholarship committee at the April meeting. They reviewed recent and future volunteer and fundraising projects, including the recently successful annual President's Day bake sale, held at Shaw's in Ludlow. GFWC Vermont State President and OVWC member Darlene Remy encouraged members to attend the GFWC Vermont State meeting, which will be held on May 2 and hosted by the Castleton Women's Club.

The club voted to make a donation to Heifer International, an organization that works with partners to support farmers in sustainably addressing hunger and poverty in their communities with a focus on transforming food systems. They facilitate creation of locally organized collectives, primarily women-led self-help groups, many of which evolve into agricultural cooperatives, producer organizations, and business hubs.

The club also collected dish detergent to donate to Black River Good Neighbor Services in Ludlow.

The next meeting of the GFWC Okemo Valley Women's Club will be held Monday, April 13, at 6:30 p.m., at the Black River Valley Senior Center in Ludlow. Anyone wishing to attend may contact President Sally Scarp at 407-242-0901; Membership Chair Cynthia Mischel, or any club-woman.

The Okemo Valley Women's Club is a member of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, an international women's organization dedicated to community improvement and enhancing the lives of others through volunteer service.

Interactive family play and learning experience –

CHESTER, Vt. – In celebration of the Week of the Young Child, Whiting Library invites families with infants and toddlers to participate in a unique, interactive play-based learning experience designed to support early childhood development and strengthen caregiver-child connections, on Tuesday, April 14, at 10 a.m.

This 90-minute immersion session will be led by Cara Tyrrell, a nationally recognized early childhood teacher trainer, author, and parent educator who grew up in Chester. The program offers a hands-on alternative to a traditional author talk and will take place within the library's Family Place playgroup environment. Each participating family will receive a copy of Tyrrell's newly published book "Talk to Them Early and Often: A Caregiver's Guide to Intentional Language Development for Infants and Toddlers" to take home.

During the play-group session, Tyrrell will model intentional language strategies rooted in her collaborative discipline framework: connect, communicate, collaborate, and compromise. These research-backed techniques help caregivers understand how everyday interactions and word choices can spark early learning, support emotional regulation, and build strong relationships.

Caregivers will observe intentional language strategies in action and practice techniques with their children during the play group. Participants will receive caregiver coaching and leave with practical tools to use with young children right away.

The program emphasizes learning through low-pressure, playful moments, and ways of helping caregivers build confidence in supporting their child's development through everyday interactions.

A follow-up author chat with Tyrrell will be held at Whiting Library on Saturday, May 9, at 10:30 a.m., offering families the opportunity to return with questions and receive additional guidance on applying these communication strategies at home. This two-part model ensures that the experience is not only inspiring, but also practical and sustainable.

For more information, contact Carrie King, youth librarian, at youthlibrarian@whitinglibrary.org. Register for the play group online at www.whitinglibrary.org/event/playgroup-for-littles-0-5-caregivers-7. Whiting Library is located at 117 Main Street, Chester, Vt.

Ludlow Rotary welcomes VAST President Patty Companik

LUDLOW, Vt. – The Ludlow Rotary Club recently welcomed guest speaker Patty Companik, president of the Vermont Association of Snow Travelers (VAST).

Founded in 1967, VAST is a nonprofit, member-based organization that maintains Vermont's 4,000-mile snowmobile trail system. This network is supported largely by dedicated volunteers, who groom trails, organize fundraisers, manage communications, and keep operations running smoothly. Their efforts help provide a safe and enjoyable outdoor experience for riders of all ages and skill levels.

Companik emphasized the critical role of private landowners, noting that about 80% of Vermont's trails cross privately owned land. She expressed VAST's deep appreciation for the cooperation that makes the statewide trail system possible.

Snowmobiling is also a major economic driver, contributing more than $550 million annually to Vermont's economy and supporting local businesses, from lodging and restaurants, to gas stations, repair shops, and equipment retailers. The ripple effect is felt throughout many rural communities, and even influences the real estate market, as seasonal visitors and second-home owners are drawn to areas with trail access.

Those interested in getting started are encouraged to explore guided rides through organizations such as Snowmobile Vermont, which provide instruction and a safe introduction to the trails. Riders must have a registered snowmobile, liability insurance, and a trail pass. Individuals born after 1983 must also complete a safety course.

For more information, visit VAST at www.vast.org.

home sweet home PROS TO KNOW

How homebuyers are lowering their payments

REGION – If interest rates have been holding you back from buying, you're not alone. It's one of the biggest reasons people are staying on the sidelines. But here's what many buyers don't realize: You don't have to take the market rate at face value. Even in today's environment, there are ways to bring your monthly payment down without waiting on rates to change.

Lower your payment in the early years

A temporary buydown can reduce your interest rate for the first few years of your loan, which lowers your monthly payment upfront. This works by having a seller or builder set aside funds at closing to temporarily "cover" part of your interest. That lowers your effective rate early on, without increasing your loan amount or requiring more out of pocket from you. That means lower payments in years one to three, funded by the seller or builder as a negotiation tool, which helps create breathing room early in homeownership.

For example, with a 2-1 buydown, your rate could be reduced by 2% in year one, and 1% in year two, before adjusting to the full rate.

Buyers use temporary buydowns because they can make a home feel more affordable right now, especially if you expect your income to grow, plan to refinance later, or want more flexibility in the early years of your mortgage.

Lower your rate for the long run

You can also choose to buy down your rate permanently with discount points. Instead of lowering your rate temporarily, you pay a one-time cost at closing to secure a lower rate for the entire life of your loan.

One point typically costs 1% of your loan amount. Each discount point may lower the interest rate as much as 0.25%, depending on product and loan characteristics.

This results in a lower monthly payment from day one.

The key concept here is your break-even point, or how long it takes for your monthly savings to outweigh the upfront cost.

If buyers plan to stay in their home for several years, this strategy can lead to meaningful long-term savings.

Two strategies, two different goals

“April showers? Plan a garden!”

CHESTER, Vt. – Don't let a rainy day get you down; plan a garden. Good vegetable garden designs maximize space and accessibility. Traditional planting in rows is probably the most familiar garden design and works quite well. Prepare your beds, follow the instructions on the seed packet for sowing, and you're good to go.

Take care to learn which vegetables are best grown away from each other and which ones make good companions, and rotate the vegetables from one season to the next to avoid nutrient depletion. Common companions are marigolds planted near tomatoes or kale, for example, which assist in pest control. You might include “cutting” flowers in the vegetable garden too. Zinnias are a favorite in the Chester Community Garden, adding a profusion of fiesta-like colors that make easy arrangements. Sunflowers, another favorite, attract pollinators like bees and butterflies, and can provide protection from intense afternoon sun for shade-loving crops like lettuce, spinach, and basil.

The Three Sisters way of gardening is another method used in the Chester Community Garden. It consists of corn, pole beans, and squash. The corn is planted first, providing the “pole” for the beans to climb, and squash is planted around the outer edge. The large squash leaves shade the ground, help retain moisture, and cut down on weed growth.

The square-foot gardening method, developed by Mel Bartholomew, is designed to maximize yields in minimal space while minimizing labor. It's a highly efficient, intensive planting method that divides 4-by-4-foot raised beds into 1-by-1-foot squares for optimized yields. The design spells out how many plants or seeds go in each square for best results. If planning multiple beds close to each other, it's good to create a path between the beds. Stone or salvaged brick are aesthetically pleasing options, or you can just use straw. Avoid using hay in paths, as it's loaded with weed seeds.

Vertical gardening utilizes A-frame trellises built with bamboo poles and string or sheep fencing to form a hoop arbor. Vining crops like pole beans, cucumbers, and squash grow upward, freeing ground space and improving air circulation. A trellis is great for connecting two plots; they not only create easy access to harvest vegetables as they ripen, but their height creates an eye-catching feature in the garden.

Raised beds allow for perfect soil control and easy access. Ideal designs often use 4-foot-wide beds built of wood. But container-type raised beds can be all shapes and sizes. You may have seen round strawberry beds created in tiers like a wedding cake. Raised wooden structures can allow for standing access, or can be U-shaped for wheelchair accessibility. Raised beds are not always planted inside of a structure; they can be created by just elevating rows of soil. Raised plots or rows are a good design option if your garden area is particularly wet.

Find a spot in your garden for a small, leafy fruit tree. Put out a couple of bistro chairs and a small table for when you need a lunch break or a visit with another gardener. Make a tepee out of small branches for pole beans, and the kiddos have a fun shady hiding place, too. The Chester Community Garden has a few plots available for anyone who lives or works in the community. They also have raised-bed options for standing or wheelchair access. Julie Abraham, 1958-2026

LUDLOW, Vt. – On the evening of March 29, the light was taken from Julie, after a brief but very brave battle with cancer.

Julie Anne was born March 2, 1958, at Edwards Air Force Base, to mother Jenny and Airman Gordon, who was on assignment to plan and survey the new runways that would not only carry military aircraft, but also space shuttles.

Two years later, Julie, her parents, and her new little brother packed up the family station wagon and drove from Southern California all the way back home to Essex, Vt. Julie attended Essex schools and graduated from the University of Vermont with an accounting degree.

She moved to Hartford, Conn., to work as a corporate auditor for one of the big firms, Arthur Young. She continued her financial career, culminating as chief financial officer for several public and private corporations. She also held positions on several boards of directors, contributing to the success of various companies, and was finance director for Vail's Northeast resorts. Ever a champion of education and knowledge, she was a founding board member of the Expeditionary School at Black River. She was presently serving as an owner/partner at Mary Davis Real Estate Company in Ludlow, Vt.

Julie met and fell in love with George Abraham. They were married on November 2, 1992, and later had two wonderful girls, Jamie Elizabeth and Casey Lynn. They built a beautiful home in Avon, Conn., where they made many special memories.

Summers were spent at Coral Sands Beach in Westbrook, Conn., and on the family boat, Yes Dear. When the girls were in middle school, the Abraham family moved full time to Westbrook and built another stunning home at Island View Beach. She always had a keen eye for fashion, art, and interior design.

Winters were spent skiing and racing at Okemo Mountain in Ludlow, Vt. The countless ski and beach families have been such an important part of Julie's life, and the special memories will sustain us all going forward.

Julie loved to travel and experience new places. Some of the highlights include family trips to France, Italy, England, Spain, New Zealand, Australia, and Greece; sailing through the British Virgin Islands; and skiing in Colorado, Utah, and California.

Julie and George relocated full time to Ludlow, Vt., and completed yet another spectacular home renovation overlooking Okemo Mountain. Many friends and family enjoyed delicious meals, card games, and evenings around their gorgeous fire pit.

Always active, she was an avid runner who completed many road races. She enjoyed hiking the Vermont mountains and walking the beaches of Westbrook, Conn.

She was a mom to many, from soccer teams to skiing racing teammates. She could easily calculate ski race points in her head, and was famous for making garric bread at pasta dinners the night before a soccer game.

She loved to get her hands dirty designing and maintaining the beautiful landscaping at all of her homes. No weed was safe, and all her flowers and trees were lovingly cared for.

More important than all her professional achievements was the fact that she made her family and her friends the center of her life. She was generous, warm, and welcoming, funny, easy to talk to, supportive, and so loving. She was the sunshine that gave life to so many.

Words cannot express the deep sorrow of losing her light. Her young, strong, healthy, and beautiful spirit will live on in all the lives she touched, and she will be thought of always.

A celebration of life will be held at Water's Edge Resort in Westbrook, Conn., on Sunday, April 19, from 12-3 p.m., open to all. A celebration of life in Vermont will occur later in the summer, with details to follow.

In lieu of flowers, please consider making a donation in Julie's honor to the Okemo Mountain School via the Julie Abraham Scholarship Fund, at www.okemomountainsschool.org/donate. Alternatively, the Black River Good Neighbor Services (BRGNS) organization is a local charity serving the Okemo Valley. Checks can be made out to BRGNS, with the memo indicating "In honor of Julie Abraham," and mailed to Black River Good Neighbor Services, 37B Main Street, Ludlow, VT 05149. For more information, please visit www.brgn.org.

James E. Pelkey, 1952-2025

SPRINGFIELD, Vt. – James E. Pelkey, a resident of Springfield, passed away peacefully on Nov. 14, at Cheshire Medical Center in Keene, N.H. His sister was with him, and his brothers had been with him throughout the day. He had been most recently hospitalized the week prior to his passing, and had many family members stop in to visit him. For the past few months, Jim had been saying he "was ready" and wanted to go see family. We knew what he meant, but we were not ready for that to happen.

Jim was born in Springfield, on Jan. 15, 1952, to Edward and Linda (Pollard) Pelkey, and grew up in Proctorsville. As a youth, he attended the Methodist Church and was a member of the Boy Scouts.

Jim graduated from Green Mountain Union High School in Chester, and went on to work for General Electric in Rutland as a machinist, retiring in 2009 after 39 years.

Every August growing up meant the Pollard family reunion. Relatives arrived from Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Virginia for the festivities. Jim loved his family, and was a very giving man. Over the years, he adopted many four-legged babies, and he doted on them. They were all spoiled!

Jim enjoyed hunting and fishing, making baked beans, and, in later years, woodburning. You could also find him off visiting with his close friends, and going for drives with a dog at his side.

Survivors include his siblings, Cindy, of Standish, Maine, Brian, of Proctorsville, and Alan, of Chester; and a cousin, Charles Pollard, who was always thought of as our older brother. Jim leaves behind his nieces and nephews, and a very large extended family.

Jim was predeceased by his parents, a nephew, and a niece. There will be a spring burial at Hillcrest Cemetery in Proctorsville.

Dear Editor,

In the tumultuous year of 1848, during the Young Irish Disorders, nine men were captured, tried, and convicted of treason against Her Majesty: John Mitchell, Morris Lyene, Pat Donohue, Thomas McGee, Charles Duffy, Thomas Meagher, Richard O’Gorman, Terrence McManus, and Michael Ireland.

Before sentencing, the judge invited any of the men to speak. Meagher, representing the group, remarked, “My Lord, this is our first offense, but not our last. If you show us leniency this time, we promise, as gentlemen, to do better next time. And surely, we won’t get caught again.” The judge, outraged, sentenced them to be hanged, drawn, and quartered. However, worldwide protests compelled Queen Victoria to commute their sentences, leading to their banishment to Australia.

In 1874, Queen Victoria was surprised to find that the new prime minister of Australia, Sir Charles Duffy, was one of the men she had exiled 25 years earlier. Curious about the others, she received this report: Meagher, governor of Montana; McManus, brigadier general, U.S. Army; Donohue, brigadier general, U.S. Army; O’Gorman, governor of Newfoundland; Lyene, attorney general of Australia, later succeeded by Ireland; McGee, member of Parliament and president of council, Montreal, Canada; Mitchell, New York politician and father of John P. Mitchell, who was mayor of New York at the start of World War I.

Clearly, these men seized their opportunities.

April is Global Volunteer Month, a time to acknowledge the significant impact volunteers have on their communities, as well as the profound benefits volunteering brings to those who offer their time.

As many face feelings of loneliness, volunteering provides a rare chance for genuine connection. Research consistently shows that it reduces stress and depression, fosters stronger social ties, and enhances one’s sense of purpose. In essence, volunteering benefits both the volunteer and those he or she assists.

As a member of the Rotary Club of Springfield, Vt., I can personally vouch for these benefits. Organizations like Rotary offer structured, ongoing opportunities to serve alongside others, turning good intentions into meaningful action. Along the way, volunteers forge friendships, develop leadership skills, and enjoy helping others.

The advantages extend to individuals at all life stages. For young professionals, it broadens networks and hones skills; for retirees, it provides routine and a sense of purpose; and for anyone feeling isolated, it offers a reason to engage and feel needed.

Just like the nine Irishmen from more than a century ago, you have the opportunity to make a difference by getting involved with Rotary. To learn more, visit www.springfield-vtrotary.org.

Sincerely,
Martin Cohn, Secretary
Rotary Club of Springfield, Vt.

Dear Editor,

Thank you, voters of Ludlow! On March 24, residents of the town and village cast their ballots in favor of the town and village merger. More than 80% of town voters who voted on March 24 said yes, and 85% of those who voted on the village side said yes. The merger is a monumental step in the right direction and will undoubtedly contribute to the success of Ludlow’s future.

For those who still question the benefits of a merger, please reach out to Ludlow Town Hall, and ask to speak with me or set up an appointment; I am happy to discuss. Let’s keep moving forward!

Sincerely,
Penny K. Wu
Ludlow Town Manager

Dear Editor,

What do we lose if Weathersfield loses another budget vote for our K-8 school and our students?

We urge voters to come out on Tuesday, April 14, to vote a resounding “yes” in favor of your school. Sadly, only 30% of our registered voters, a significant minority, voted during the March 3 election. Good schools grow good towns.

The school board and the principal have worked diligently since the failed vote to identify areas in which the board has any authority to make cuts. Much of our budget, including teacher salaries and health care, as well as special education costs, are determined by the State of Vermont or are under contract.

We send out our high school students, which is of benefit to both the town and to our students. However, the tuition is another expense beyond our control.

If the budget does not pass this time, half the teaching staff could receive pink slips. We are likely to lose valuable teachers.

The voters should take pride in the fact that our Weathersfield School is one of only 19 public schools, of approximately 300 in the state, that are “meeting and are excelling” the standards of the Vermont State Report Card published in February. Good teachers grow good students.

We the undersigned, the school board, and town officials are aware of the financial challenges faced by many in our community. We all share the challenges of rising prices for food, fuel, and other necessities, as well as rising health and insurance costs.

If you are concerned about affording your property taxes this coming year, please, even if you do not file an income tax return, do complete an application for the Vermont Homestead Exemption, available at the town hall, by April 15.

This yearly property tax exemption is available to any Vermont homeowner whose household income is below $115,000, and who has lived in Vermont for more than a year. It can provide a significant reduction in your tax bill.

If you are older or of a low income and in need of help completing that form, you may be able to get free assistance with that form by calling 802-875-2418 for an appointment on a Tuesday at the Proctor Library in Ascutney. Appointments are in demand!

Please come out and vote to support the Weathersfield School on Tuesday, April 14. You can also vote early at the town office or call the town clerk at 802-674-2626 to receive an absentee ballot.

This is Vermont. Imagine our school as a future orchard in which you are planting fruit trees you may never enjoy yourself – a selfless, enduring gift. Good students grow good communities.

Thank you.

Political letters include endorsing, electioneering, or campaigning for, or against, a specific candidate or party.

Dear Editor,

I would like to address the unacceptable tax situation that the State Legislature is feeling entitled to levy on the good citizens of Vermont, specifically the education tax and the multi-million dollar bond for the Woodstock Union High School.

Property taxes in Vermont have risen sharply over the past several years. Vermont ranks fifth nationwide in average property tax rate, at 1.417%.

Many families are already facing affordability challenges as inflation remains elevated, health-care costs continue to rise year after year, and wage growth in Vermont has not kept pace.

According to the Vermont Futures Project, which tracks the state against national benchmarks, Vermont continues to struggle with population decline and slow economic growth, and, as of January 2026, ranks last in the nation for economic momentum.

House lawmakers advanced a bill last week tapping nearly $75 million in one-time surplus funds to hold next year’s average increase to around 7%. The underlying math hasn’t changed: Education costs are growing about twice as fast as the revenues that support them. Vermont’s per-pupil costs remain among the highest in the nation. Enrollment continues to fall, and an aging population means a shrinking tax base.

Vermont is losing population. For three years running, Vermont has topped the list of all states in percentage loss of population. New U.S. Census estimates show the state had the largest percentage decline in the country last year. Vermont Public reports the loss of more than 1,800 residents, driven by an aging population and continued out-migration. For the second year in a row, more people left the state than moved in. By 2030, roughly one in three Vermonters will be over 65. That means fewer workers, fewer students, and higher health-care costs, all putting pressure on the tax base. At the same time, decades of constrained development have left Vermont with one of the oldest housing stocks in the nation, worsening affordability just as the state needs younger workers and families to move in.

Vermont is amongst the lowest in the country in housing affordability and has some of the highest tax rates in the country. There are only approximately 400 students at the current Woodstock Union High School, and enrollment will continue to fall throughout the next few years. Teachers cannot afford to move here. Young families will not relocate to the area because of the tax burden imposed on its citizens by an ignorant legislative body.

The local school board has misrepresented the Woodstock Union High School project to the public by ignoring the facts. There is no need to do a complete renovation.

The elderly, middle class, and those at poverty level are already suffering, and this bond will cripple the next generation with debt that will destroy lives.

People in the age group from 20-40 are leaving Vermont because there are no jobs, no housing, and no hope for the future to make a decent living.

The $111 million requested to build a new school is beyond comprehension in this state of financial instability. What cost $88 million two years ago is now up to $111 million, and yet the board failed to take into consideration the state of the world economy when proposing these numbers.

Stop the madness of spending and driving the residents of Vermont into poverty.

Sincerely,
Rick Martin

Pianist David Feurzeig to play Weathersfield

WEATHERSFIELD, Vt. – Renowned pianist David Feurzeig will perform his 97th Vermont concert on Saturday, April 18, at 3 p.m., in Weathersfield, Vt., at the Perkinsville Community Church, 35 Church Street, with local performer Naomi Morse (fiddle and voice), continuing Feurzeig’s exciting tour – a free show in all of Vermont’s 252 towns to spread the joy of music and promote environmentally sustainable performance. In May of 2022, he embarked on his “Play Every Town” project: 252 free concerts in each of Vermont’s 252 towns to combat climate change through the power of community and music. With this project, Feurzeig will become the first musician to perform in every Vermont municipality. He will travel in his solar-charged electric vehicle throughout the state, offering free concerts to bring attention to the interrelated issues of climate and community, while bringing the joy of music to his audiences.

Klezmer all-star evening at Next Stage

PUTNEY, Vt. – Next Stage Arts is thrilled to present an extraordinary evening of klezmer and Yiddish music featuring Jake Shulman-Ment and Abigale Reisman: Two Strings, and Ira Temple & Michael Winograd, on Friday, April 17. Doors open at 6:45 p.m., with the show beginning at 7:30 p.m. Advance tickets are available discounted at www.nextstagearts.org.

This double bill brings together two of the most exciting ensembles in contemporary klezmer and Yiddish music. Each draws on a distinct branch of the klezmer tradition, one rooted in old-world European string band aesthetics, the other inspired by the clarinet-led sound of mid-20th-century New York. Together, they bridge eras of Ashkenazic musical history, offering a fresh and original soundtrack of the diaspora.

Violinists Jake Shulman-

Ment and Abigale Reisman are celebrated as two of the most virtuosic klezmer musicians working today. Their collaboration, Two Strings, is a string band project that blends breathtaking technique, deep grounding in Yiddish and Eastern European traditions, and a fearless spirit of improvisation. With longtime collaborators Pete Rushefsky on tsimbl and Raffi Boden on cello, Two Strings weaves original compositions, newly set early-20th-century radical Yiddish poetry, and rediscovered works from forgotten manuscripts into music that is simultaneously haunting, ecstatic, and timeless.

Ira Temple and Michael Winograd are central figures in New York City’s vibrant klezmer scene. Accordionist and songwriter Temple is the founder of the radical Yiddish project Tsi-bele and a longtime director of the Aftselakhis Spectacle Committee Purimshpil. His upcoming solo album, “Strange Tongue – Mistame-Loshn,” reimagines traditional Yiddish songs through queer and trans-inflected English-language expansions, bringing Yiddish culture alive in contemporary Brooklyn.

Clarinetist Winograd has performed with leading figures in Jewish music, including Itzhak Perlman, Frank London, and the Klezmatiks, and brings klezmer to global audiences with his band The Honorable Metnshn. His upcoming release, “TANZ! Live in New York City,” recreates the iconic 1956 klezmer album “TANZ!,” celebrating the clarinet-led sound of midcentury klezmer masters.

This concert is presented with the generous support of the Harold Grinspoon Foundation.

“MORE” at Artistree’s The Grange Theatre

S. POMFRET, Vt. – Artistree is thrilled to announce that playwright Becca Schlossberg, director Hondo Weiss-Richmond, and actor Jordan Elliot (previously seen at The Grange Theatre in “Sylvia”) will participate in a two-week artist residency at The Grange Theatre to develop their new play, “MORE.” Two public presentations of the work-in-progress will take place on Friday, April 17, at 7 p.m.; and Sunday, April 19, at 3 p.m., at The Grange Theatre, 65 Stage Road, South Pomfret, Vt. Admission is pay-what-you-wish. To reserve your seat, or for more information, visit www.artistreevt.org.

An audience is vital not only on a play’s opening night, but also during its development. Be a part of the first audience to experience “MORE” and help shape the play as it continues its journey toward its world premiere. This workshop presentation, somewhere between a play reading and a performance, will give you an inside look at how a script begins to take on new life once a playwright, director, and actor spend time together in the rehearsal room.

In “MORE,” no sooner than the day he brings his newborn home from the hospital, Ben, who is estranged from his own father, starts to hear voices – voices from his Jewish ancestors, telling him he must reconnect with his faith or be damned. But what does it take to become a Jew in today’s complicated world? And how much of himself can he give before he falls apart? “MORE” is a part-comedic, part-dramatic, moving exploration of how one modern man navigates the lines between family and religion, and freedom and faith.

Weiss-Richmond, Elliot, and Schlossberg will also lead the class “No Accidents,” centered on the essay “Visit to a Small Planet” by Elinor Fuchs. Participants will unlock a powerful new way to read and think about plays. Through guided conversation, they will apply the essay to excerpts from such well-loved works as “Arcadia,” “Noises Off,” “Urinetown,” and “Dybbuk Bat Mitzvah” by Schlossberg, which just received an industry reading at the Broadway/Off-Broadway company Manhattan Theatre Club. The class will meet on Monday and Wednesday evenings, April 6-15. To register and receive more information, visit www.artistreevt.org.

Bidi Dworkin featuring Peter Eldridge at Stage 33

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt. – Singer and composer Bidi Dworkin draws from a deep well of influences: the jazz-folk lineage of her childhood, the Middle Eastern melodies of her ancestry, the fluidity of Vedic meditative traditions – a fusion enriched by intuitive language and a dreamy interior landscape. She honed her chops the old-fashioned way: gigging in New York City, Montreal, and New England.

Her long-gestating debut album, “Beautiful

Souvenirs,” was arranged by legendary jazz vocalist Jay Clayton, and she’s poised to enter the recording studio for a follow-up of original songs in collaboration with two-time Grammy-winning pianist-composer Peter Eldridge, who has described the new work as “equal amounts of light and dark, whimsy and reflection, each song evolving into what’s starting to feel like a set of jazz art songs.”

She will share her new compositions in a 3 p.m. matinee at Stage 33 Live in Bellows Falls, Vt., on Saturday, April 18, along with Grammy winner Peter Eldridge on piano, Jamie MacDonald on bass, Matt Steckler on horns, Claire Arenius on drums, plus a special surprise guest.

Tickets can be purchased in advance through www.stage33live.com, or at the door as available. Advance tickets guarantee entry. Advance ticket sales will automatically close once 40 tickets are sold, or at midnight the day before the show if it hasn’t sold out. More information can be found at the website above.

“Music Through a Prism”

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. – Step into a world of color, light, and sound with the Windham Philharmonic’s spring concerts, “Music Through a Prism,” on Saturday, April 11, and Monday, April 13. This program refracts baroque, romantic, and modern music through a vivid kaleidoscope of textures and moods.

The concert includes Bach’s “Concerto for Oboe and Violin in C minor,” featuring oboist Aaron Lakota and concertmaster Michelle Liechti, a sparkling dialogue of drive and elevated expression. Maria Gabriella Mendez will enchant us all with the smiling sadness of Dvořák’s “Violin Romance.”

Combining lush harmonies with a modernist sparkle, Glazunov’s “Saxophone Concerto of 1934” showcases alto saxophone soloist Nick Pelton. The program closes with Dvořák’s “Jarní (Spring),” a brief, jubilant celebration of renewal and blossoming energy for orchestra and our guest soloists.

Visual art and music meet in Pedro Pereira’s cubist-inspired poster, expertly suggesting the playful, multifaceted musical journey awaiting the audience.

“Music Through a Prism” is a concert of vibrant orchestral sound and inventive programming, played by soloists celebrated and beloved by local audiences.

The Saturday, April 11 performance will be held at 7 p.m., at St. Mary’s in the Mountains Church, 13 East Main Street in Wilmington, Vt.

The Monday, April 13 performance will be held at 7 p.m., at the Latchis Theatre, 50 Main Street in Brattleboro.

Tickets are by donation at the door; all are welcome.

Local builders earn High Performance Builder certification

REGION – On March 12, six area carpenters completed training to earn the Sustainable Energy Outreach Network's (SEON) Level I High Performance Builder certification. The newly certified builders represent three Windham County companies, all members of SEON: Black Mountain Builders, Mathes Hulme Builders, and Apple Tree Builders.

The following organizations provided resources for the class: Windham Regional Career Center, WW Building Supply, Benjamin Obdyke, 475 High Performance Building Supply, TimberHP, and Sierra Pacific Windows.

To achieve certification, participants successfully completed two courses: "Basics of High Performance Building" and, most recently, the hands-on course "Water, Air, and Thermal Continuous Control Layers." With this most recent cohort, a total of 33 carpenters and builders have now earned SEON's Level I certification.

The knowledge and skills gained through these courses are foundational for addressing building challenges in Vermont's cold and wet climate. Most building failures can be traced to a lack of understanding or improper application of building science principles. As instructors often note, "It's the attention to detail and level of precision that guides the team's building process and distinguishes a durable, energy-efficient home."

For homeowners planning to build or renovate, selecting a builder with a trained workforce is critical. The knowledge and skills of building science embedded in these courses are essential to achieve the level of efficiency and comfort homeowners deserve.

The Sustainable Energy Outreach Network (SEON) is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit training organization that delivers in-person courses on building science and leadership development throughout Vermont. To learn more and view the 2026 training schedule, visit www.buildingscience.org.

CCCA hosts presentation on strategic wood addition to rivers

CAVENDISH, Vt. – On March 25, the Cavendish Community and Conservation Association (CCCA), with the support of the Cavendish Fletcher Community Library, hosted a presentation on strategic wood addition with Jud Kratzer, a fisheries biologist with Vermont Fish and Wildlife.

Strategic wood addition addresses the issues that can arise when a stream has a deficiency of woody material habitat. This wood addition is performed in a stream where it is likely to stay and have a lasting, beneficial impact. The felled trees added to the stream are selected and positioned to maximize benefit and stability.

Kratzer explained that large woody material has been a natural and important component of stream habitats in the Northeastern United States. Mature forests naturally contribute this material when trees fall into streams. "Two of the best things we can do for streams is to protect and restore streamside forests, and to leave downed trees where they lie." Strategic wood addition is a method for helping to restore streams where the forests have declined along their banks.

"In this age of increasing flood frequency and severity, restoring large wood loading to upland streams can benefit not only the aquatic organisms in the stream, but also humans living downstream. Large wood can improve floodplain connection in upstream, undeveloped areas, thereby potentially reduce flood impacts downstream through flood flow storage and sediment retention. It can also help to reduce nutrient loading downstream," according to the Strategic Wood Addition Handbook.

Strategic wood addition has also been effective in increasing fish populations. In one six-year study of a watershed, the brook trout population tripled on average where large wood was added using these techniques. This study also showed that strategic wood addition not only increased brook trout in the areas of improvement, but also increased brook trout in the stream as a whole.

Kratzer also addressed what Vermont's streams and rivers looked like before European settlement, and how ongoing developments impacted them. For more information, you can find the Strategic Wood Addition Handbook online at www.anr.vermont.gov/content/vermont-strategic-wood-addition-handbook.

You can reach Kratzer with your questions at Jud.Kratzer@vermont.gov.
