New executive director of Okemo Valley TV

LUDLOW, Vt. – Veteran broadcaster and multimedia communications professional B.J. Finnell has been named executive director of Okemo Valley TV and WLUD Radio in Ludlow. Finnell brings decades of experience in broadcasting, journalism, marketing, and public relations, having worked for CBS, NBC, ABC, Regan Communications Group of Boston, and other companies across the United States. He is an Emmy and Associated Press Award winner, and his background includes roles as a television news producer, radio news anchor, and multimedia communications consultant. Finnell succeeds longtime Executive Director Patrick Cody, who is transitioning into an advisory role and taking on special projects after leading Okemo Valley TV for nearly all of the organization's 25-year history of community service. Under Cody's leadership, Okemo Valley TV has become a trusted local media resource dedicated to covering community events, local government, schools, and regional stories throughout the Okemo Valley.

In his new role, Finnell will oversee ongoing operations and strategic growth for Okemo Valley TV while also leading the development and launch of WLUD Radio, which is scheduled to debut in late 2026 or early 2027.

"B.J.'s extensive experience makes him the ideal leader to guide our organization into its next chapter," said Wendell Perkins, board president of Okemo Valley TV and WLUD Radio. "As we celebrate 25 years of community service and launch the community radio station [WLUD], we are excited about the vision, energy, and leadership he brings. We're also grateful to Patrick Cody for his decades of dedication and the tremendous foundation he has built for local media in the Okemo Valley."

"I've always believed local media plays an essential role in bringing communities together," said Finnell. "Okemo Valley TV has built an incredible legacy over the past 25 years thanks to Patrick's leadership and commitment to the community. I'm honored to continue that tradition while helping launch WLUD Radio as a new local voice for the region. I look forward to finding new ways to inform, entertain, and support the people and organizations that make this community special."

Okemo Valley TV has served the region for 25 years with a growing variety of community-based media services for residents, municipal governments, schools, and nonprofit organizations throughout the region. The addition of WLUD community radio later this year will expand the organization's ability to keep the community connected. Sage Jewelry and Gifts finds perfect fit on The Common

BY PAULA BENSON

The Vermont Journal

CHESTER, Vt. – There has been another shift on the retail frontage of the Chester Green, and it is a welcome upgrade for the longtime occupant of 78 The Common, Sage Jewelry and Gifts.

"I always wanted a store on the front," said owner Michele Colby, who first opened her shop 14 years ago. "And I wanted a store with real display windows. I love to do the displays."

As of April 18, Sage Jewelry and Gifts is officially located at 102 The Common, at the corner of The Common and School Street, and its two large storefront windows are already popping. Currently they feature cleverly spring-themed displays, one with a large purple butterfly and orange mushroom, the other with a hanging umbrella. Each window also exhibits some of the jewelry, art, ceramics, and glassware Colby carries in the gift shop. She adds antiques, found objects, and items from nature to her creative displays to highlight the unique beauty of each piece. Her plan is to switch out the displays seasonally.

Colby grew up in North Westminster before moving to Santa Monica, Calif., at 18 to attend the Gemological Institute of America (GIA), where she graduated with a graduate jeweler gemologist degree.

"I have always loved jewelry, rocks, tumble stones, and beads," related Colby. Like most kids, Colby collected rocks and tumble stones she found along her path. Her jewelry career began in Bellows Falls at Rock & Hammer while Colby was still in high school.

Colby had a job at a craft supply store and was making friendship bracelets when she found out the owner of Rock & Hammer was interested in carrying the bracelets, and they connected. Later Colby started working at the store.

After graduating from GIA, Colby returned to the area and worked for many years as a jewelry appraiser in West Lebanon. But she missed crafting her own jewelry, and admitted,

"I found that fine jewelry wasn't my thing. I like craft, so having a gift shop with a more crafty style was [better suited] for me."

Colby also relayed that having two small children made the commute to West Lebanon difficult. In 2010, Colby decided to set up her own shop in a small space at the back of the Moon Dog Cafe when it was in Chester, where she showcased her jewelry designs. Colby kept an "open studio" schedule, which gave her the flexibility she needed to spend more time with her kids.

When the space at 78 The Common became available, Colby moved in and stayed for 14 years. "That established my local clientele and allowed me to develop my own line of jewelry," Colby recalled.

Colby's designs are inspired by nature, some containing freshwater pearls and gemstones. Colby forges her own sterling silver jewelry creations and much more, with 99% of the jewelry Sage Jewelry stocks hand-crafted by Colby. She began offering jewelry repair several years ago and reported that it is a growing part of her business.

Sage Jewelry is proud to carry creations from between 15 and 20 artists from Vermont, New England, and elsewhere in the U.S., as well as fair-trade items. Colby's philosophy is shop local, shop small, reduce, reuse, and recycle.

Some artisans featured in the shop are Cathy LeMay, of Dellamano Glassware in Bellows Falls, who produces hand-painted glassware and framed original art pieces; Carve Designs, of Calais, Vt., who creates gorgeous greeting cards with reproductions of original designs made with Japanese origami paper; Lisa Murray from Rockingham, who makes hand-marbled candles; and Oregon-based Clay in Motion, crafters of functional stoneware with unique colors and designs who offer a variety of pottery sets and specialty pieces.

Colby's shop is beautifully appointed, with luminous track lighting bringing out all the shimmering beauty of her creations, laid out in gorgeous jewelry and display cases. Colby is usually the one behind the counter, so customers can come in expecting excellent service and an amazing selection of lovingly curated gifts and treasures.

Visit the Sage Jewelry website, www.sagejewelryvt.com, or Facebook page for more information, and join in wishing Sage Jewelry and Gifts at least another 14 years of success on the Chester Green.

Londonderry discusses future land purchases

BY SHAWN TAE WEBB

The Vermont Journal

LONDONDERRY, Vt. – The Londonderry Selectboard discussed future land purchases for use by the town at their May 18 meeting. Board member Taylor Prouty acknowledged the "sign of support" from the town at the recent special town meeting, when the article for the town to research land for purchase was passed.

Board Chair Tom Cavanaugh explained at the May 13 special town meeting that the town is now using all of its available land for the new wastewater system. Prouty voiced that it makes sense for the town to look into viable land options that can be used for housing, future wastewater systems, or other beneficial development opportunities for the town.

Prouty expressed his desire to keep this conversation going, talk with realtors and landowners, and discuss budgets and where the funds would come from, so that when an opportunity arises, the town can act on it. He mentioned borrowing from the cemetery commission as a purchasing option. "We know that we're going to need land for something," Prouty stated.

It was generally agreed that the board needs to identify criteria for the land, which may be different depending on the parcel and its potential use, as well as the funding mechanism. Town Administrator Aileen Tulloch suggested assembling a land acquisition task force.

The board heard from concerned citizen Melissa Brown regarding the votes and the ballot box at the May 13 special town meeting, where the vote on whether the town should raise $81,000 in taxes to fund a general office manager was rejected by one vote. Treasurer Tina Labeau stated that there were 67 people counted who voted by paper ballot, and 66 ballots, explaining that the number has to match. Brown questioned the petition process for the vote, to which Town Clerk Allison Marino said she would confirm the protocol and percentage of signatures needed, and the timeframe in which they need to be presented.

Tulloch announced that the selectboard meetings are officially hybrid; the permanent link is posted on the website and on agendas. She also notified the board that construction is about to start on the South Village wastewater project.

Tulloch also reported updates on the Spring Hill Road culvert project, saying VTrans has reviewed the design, and provided comments and suggestions back to Hunter Excavating to review. Hunter is working with the vendor to address these suggestions.

Additionally, Tulloch is working with KG Consulting to put in a grant application for additional funding for Phase 2 of the wastewater

Green Mountain Gardeners spring cleanup

Baklava Express at Next Stage

PUTNEY, Vt. – Next Stage Arts Project and Twilight Music present Baklava Express on Friday, May 29, at 7:30 p.m., at Next Stage Arts, 15 Kimball Hill in Putney.

Brooklyn-based Baklava Express creates vibrant, high-energy music that evokes the atmosphere of an open-air Mediterranean market. Blending ancient and modern instruments, the ensemble performs original compositions rooted in Turkish, Greek, Armenian, Arab, Mizrahi, and Sephardi musical traditions, while naturally weaving in touches of jazz, flamenco, rock, and Ottoman classical music.

Led by oud player and composer Josh Kaye, the group crafts music that feels both timeless and contemporary. Their self-produced sophomore album, “Sabá-ba,” released this spring, reflects a band that has fully grown into its collaborative sound – joyful, fluid, improvisational, and deeply lived-in.

“For ‘Dávka,’ our first album, released in 2023, we went into the studio after having only played a few gigs as a group,” says Kaye. “But for this recording, everyone’s been in the band for at least three years, so we’re playing music that we’ve performed hundreds of times. It not only sounds tighter, but we had much more freedom to improvise and make arrangements on the fly.”

While deeply informed by ancient musical traditions, Baklava Express is not a traditional music ensemble. Instead, the band creates new music inspired by the sounds and cultures surrounding them in contemporary Brooklyn neighborhoods and communities.

The music also reflects Kaye’s personal journey. Born in London and raised musically on jazz, Jewish liturgical music, and early swing recordings, Kaye eventually discovered the oud after encountering Arab musicians in his Brooklyn neighborhood. What began as a chance encounter outside an Egyptian barber shop evolved into a profound musical calling.

The resulting music transcends cultural borders while remaining grounded in human connection. Instrumental and open-ended, the compositions invite listeners to find their own stories and emotions within the music.

“This music is about having a meeting place for everyone,” says Kaye. “An instrumental song could mean anything to any person. I hope organically it becomes a meeting place for anybody who wants to listen.”

Baklava Express has earned praise for its cross-cultural approach and emotionally resonant performances. Artists Central called the group “a unique and innovative sound,” while World Music Central described the ensemble as “a profoundly moving experience that transcends geographical borders and musical conventions.”

The concert begins at 7:30 p.m., with doors opening at 6:45 p.m. Tickets are discounted if purchased in advance. Tickets and more information are available at www.nextstagearts.org.

Raku pottery class

SPRINGFIELD, Vt. – Gallery at the Vault is excited to offer a raku pottery workshop with Andrew Berends on two consecutive Saturdays, June 6 and 13, from 12-4 p.m. each day. Register by Saturday, May 30.

Berends will be teaching the exciting Japanese firing technique known as raku. Raku is a 16th-century technique developed in Japan for making tea-ceremony ware. It has been developed in this country to produce really interesting pottery. The firings take about an hour, and you get a finished piece at the end. Raku is a fun, exciting technique, where pots are fired to 1,840 degrees, pulled out of the hot kiln, and manipulated with sawdust and water to change the look of the glazes. The glazes can be metallic, and/or have a crackle effect, making each piece truly unique and one-of-a-kind. We will also fire pots with an exciting new technique known as horsehair raku, which creates interesting designs on the clay. The raku firings can be done indoors or outdoors, depending on the weather.

The class will include wheel-throwing, slab-making, and extruding instruction. The first day will include making all types of clay work, and the second day will be glazing and firing all the pots in the raku tradition. Emphasis will be on being creative, and learning the basics of pottery, including making the work, glazing, as well as firing. The class is geared towards teens through adults, and limited to four students.

Berends has been a master potter for over 30 years, with a Bachelor of Fine Arts from the New York State College of Ceramics at Alfred University, as well as a Master of Fine Arts from Montana State University. He worked with a Spanish folk potter for a year, and was also a guest artist-in-residence at Anderson Ranch in Snowmass, Colo. Upon moving to Vermont in 1988, he became a professional production/artist potter, and has exhibited internationally, as well as being represented by over 180 galleries nationally.

The cost of the workshop is discounted for gallery members, and includes 25 pounds of clay, glazes, and firing costs in a gas-fired kiln. Wear old clothing, and bring pottery tools if you have them. Directions to Berends’ studio in Springfield will be given at registration.

Gallery at the Vault is located at 68 Main Street in Springfield, and is open Wednesday-Saturday, from 11 a.m. – 5 p.m. For more information, call 802-885-7111, email gallerylvault@vermontel.net, or visit Facebook, Instagram, or www.gallerylvault.org. Gallery at the Vault is accessible.

Ludlow Area Sport Trails now Okemo Valley Trails

LUDLOW, Vt. – Ludlow Area Sport Trails (LAST) has officially rebranded as Okemo Valley Trails (OVT), reflecting the organization’s growing commitment to creating inclusive, accessible outdoor recreation opportunities throughout the Okemo Valley. The new name better represents the organization’s broader regional vision and its mission to connect more people to trails, outdoor spaces, and active lifestyles year-round.

OVT, which is a local chapter of the Vermont Mountain Bike Association (VMBA), has begun work on a new mountain bike and multiuse trail network at Fletcher Farm in Ludlow, with the first phase expected to be completed by the end of the summer. The trail system is being designed for mountain biking, but welcomes hikers, trail runners, and dog walkers, with opportunities for snowshoeing and cross-country skiing in winter.

If you’ve already biked or walked the “Back 40” trails behind the Ludlow Community Center, then you’ve seen the kind of quality, sustainable, and fun trails that OVT builds. This trail network will ultimately connect to the Fletcher Farm trails via a connector trail that is in the planning stages.

Volunteers work on mountain biking trails in Ludlow. PHOTO PROVIDED

OVT is also relaunching efforts to develop a recreation path through Ludlow connecting to Proctorsville. Similar projects were explored in the past, but faced significant logistical challenges. Today, however, the organization believes the project is more viable than before thanks to new state-level resources, growing support for active transportation infrastructure, and the success of several recreation path projects across Vermont over the past decade.

The proposed recreation path would provide a safe, accessible connection between the villages of Ludlow and Proctorsville for walking, biking, running, and other nonmotorized uses, while further strengthening the region’s recreational infrastructure and community connectivity.

“These projects represent an exciting opportunity for the Okemo Valley,” said OVT organizers. “We want to create outdoor spaces and trail systems that are welcoming, accessible, and beneficial to both residents and visitors while helping strengthen community connections throughout the region.”

OVT is currently seeking volunteers and community partners to support trail work, carpentry, planning, fundraising, marketing, community outreach, and other initiatives as these projects move forward.

For more information, or to get involved, visit www.okemovalleytrails.org or email info@okemovalleytrails.org. To join, visit www.vmba.org.

Mount Ascutney Hospital named on “critical access hospitals to know” list WINDSOR, Vt. – Mount Ascutney Hospital and Health Center (MAHHC), a member of Dartmouth Health, has been named to Becker’s Hospital Review’s 2026 “100 critical access hospitals to know” list.

Critical access hospitals like MAHHC play a unique role in the American health care system, providing essential services close to home while operating with limited resources. Becker’s noted that the hospitals included on the list are expanding access to specialty care, reducing the burden of patient travel, and bringing meaningful improvements to community health.

Since its establishment in 1933, MAHHC has built a reputation for patient-centered care and deep community connection throughout the region. The hospital has strengthened services and access to care through initiatives like expanded walk-in care hours; recruitment of six advanced practice providers and a general surgeon; and institution of key administrative roles and programs like director of quality and safety, director of community health, and a hospitalist program.

Through its affiliation with Dartmouth Health, patients also have access to specialty services, including ophthalmology surgical care provided locally at MAHHC.

“This recognition is a testament to the extraordinary dedication of every provider, nurse, and team member at Mount Ascutney Hospital,” said Matthew R. Foster, CEO and president of MAHHC. “As a critical access hospital, we’re proud to ensure that trusted, expert care remains rooted right in our community.”

In addition to this recognition from Becker’s, the hospital was also named a Best-In-State Hospital by Newsweek in 2024.

Becker’s Hospital Review developed the list through editorial research and nominations, referencing rankings and recognitions from organizations including the United Church of Ludlow to celebrate support of bell restoration with party

LUDLOW, Vt. – The United Church of Ludlow is throwing a “Ring Out Love” community celebration on Sunday, June 7, from 2-4 p.m., to thank the community for its support of the church’s newly restored, historic church bell.

Local favorite Sammy Blanchette (www.sammyblanchette.net) will provide music at the festive outdoor event. There will also be family-friendly games and ice cream on the lawn of the church, at 48 Pleasant Street in Ludlow. The highlight of the day will be the opportunity for people to pull on the rope and ring the 1,200-pound church bell, which was cast by the Holbrook Bell Foundry of East Medway, Mass., in 1839. In the event of rain, the celebration will be moved inside.

The United Church held a $50,000 fundraising campaign in 2024 and 2025 to fund the bell repair, to which church and community members have generously donated $52,455 so far, with more than $60,000 pledged. The funds have been used to repair the disintegrating supports on the bell, install a new sound system, make external repairs to the building, and donate to local aid organizations and neighbors in need.

The United Church of

Ludlow, built in 1891 as the Congregational Church of Ludlow, is listed on the National Register of Historic Places as one of the only churches in Vermont constructed in a fully mature expression of shingle-style architecture. Its Congregationalist congregation was organized in 1806, and in 1930 it merged with a Methodist congregation to form a union congregation called the United Church of Ludlow. The bell itself has a fascinating story, which can be found on the United Church website. Bellmaker Maj. George Holbrook was actually apprenticed to Paul Revere, and the historic bell was valued at more than $100,000 14 years ago.

In early 2025, the members of the United Church of Ludlow voted to become an Open and Affirming Congregation of the United Church of Christ (UCC), welcoming lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer (LGBTQ+) and all marginalized people into the full life of the church. They also voted to become a Reconciling Congregation of the United Methodist Church.

Over the years, the United Church has become a community gathering place in Ludlow, hosting concerts, events, dinners, game nights, and meetings of local nonprofit organizations.

Robin M. Key, 2026

S. LONDONDERRY, Vt. – Robin M. Key, 72, of Londonderry, Vt., died on April 30, 2026, after a brief illness. Born in Evanston, Ill., she was a respected landscape architect and the founder of RKLA Studio in Manhattan.

After graduating from the University of Vermont with a degree in plant and soil science in 1977, she continued her academic training in landscape architecture at Cornell University. In 1982, she and her husband moved to Jane Street in Manhattan, where they lived for 42 years. Robin practiced as a landscape architect in Greenwich Village while raising three children and subsequently founded RKLA Studio in 2003. As her business grew, so did her interest in public works and larger city projects, including St. Patrick’s Cathedral on Fifth Avenue, Tavern on the Green in Central Park, and Serviam Gardens, an affordable housing project in the Bronx.

In 2010, Robin joined the board of trustees of The Olana Partnership, a New York State historic site on 250 acres in Hudson, N.Y., that preserves the work and landscape of the American painter Frederic Church, foremost of the Hudson River School in the late 19th century. In April, as cochair of Olana, Robin helped to host a gala event for 400 people at the Metropolitan Museum of Art to begin the celebration of the 200th anniversary of Church’s birth.

Robin was elected a fellow of the American Society of Landscape Architects in 2018. She served on the Stewardship Council of the Cultural Landscape Foundation of Washington, D.C., and was on the advisory board for the Noguchi Museum in Queens, N.Y. The latter continues an intriguing relationship her family had with Osamu Noguchi when he came to rural Indiana from Japan as an adolescent with no particular ties to family or country.

Robin and her family own a 300-acre farm in southern Vermont. Here, Robin built her own gardens focused on perennials for cold climates, native trees, and shrubs. With her husband, much of the property was established as a working tree farm, producing timber and maple syrup. Robin guided the construction of miles of hiking and ski trails, large fields and ponds, and stonework in collaboration with Dan Snow, a well-known dry-stone sculptor.

Robin was an exceptionally generous person in both her personal and her professional life. All her friends loved working with her because of her curiosity about the natural world and her knowledge of what grows underfoot and nearby.

She is survived by her husband of 50 years, David M. Key; their children, Mckenzie, Lindsay, and Ely Key; and four grandchildren.

Robin’s love infused and sustained her family. She is missed by all for her warm spirit, but also for her iron commitment to making the world a more beautiful place.

A service will be held on May 30, at 2 p.m., at the Peru Church in Peru, Vt., where gifts can be made in lieu of flowers.

Letter to the Editor: Remembering Tyler Gilbert

Tyler Gilbert was 12 years old when his life was brutally and suddenly taken away on Aug. 4, 2021. In a matter of just a few seconds, his life was stolen from him. He had just graduated sixth grade in June and would be starting middle school with his friends in late August, at Brattleboro Area Middle School. Who would think that Tyler would be violently killed by someone who was supposed to protect him, nurture him, and love him? No more baseball games, no more playing with friends, no more birthday parties, no more riding his four-wheeler or going to MMA fights; no girlfriend, high school graduation, fiancée, wedding, children...

In order to keep Tyler’s memory alive, his mother has established a scholarship fund at Brattleboro Union High School which, to date, has awarded $5,000 to graduating seniors wishing to continue their education. Please consider donating to this wonderful cause.

Checks can be made payable to the Tyler Gilbert Memorial Scholarship Fund and mailed to Windham Southeast Supervisory Union, ATTN: Jodi Nutting, 53 Green Street, Brattleboro, VT 05301.

If you wish to help sponsor the Tyler Gilbert Memorial Softball Tournament being held May 30 and 31, at Living Memorial Park, please make checks payable to Jean Gilbert, at the same address as above. All net proceeds from the softball tournament will be placed into the Tyler Gilbert Memorial Scholarship Fund.

Come join us on May 30 and 31 to enjoy a few softball games and partake in a 50-50 raffle, some great raffle prizes, and food by Mama T’s and 802 Soul Kitchen.

“In one moment, I lost my son, and my heart still mourns the life we shared together.”

– Christie Gilbert

Dear Editor,

I'm sharing the following statement from Vermont Friends of Israel regarding the recent vandalism of a Jewish woman's storefront in Proctorsville, Vt.

"Today, a Jewish woman's storefront in rural Vermont was vandalized with antizionist graffiti.

"This was an anti-Jewish hate crime, and it is the predictable consequence of a political campaign in Vermont that demonizes Israel and pressures local communities to treat Jews and Zionists as equivalent to Nazis.

"The Apartheid Free Pledge promoted by the Palestine

Solidarity Coalition does not exist in a vacuum. It is part of a national campaign presented locally as grassroots activism.

"When antizionist activists tell people that Jews with deep spiritual, cultural, and familial ties to Israel are 'baby killers' and 'genocide supporters,' it sends a dangerous signal that intimidation against them is understandable, deserved, or even justified.

"History teaches us where this goes. First come campaigns of dehumanization, slogans, pledges, and public shaming. Now a Jewish woman's storefront has been vandalized in rural Vermont. Synagogues in Vermont have been sent death threats. Swastikas are found on Vermont school walls. Jewish students are bullied.

"What comes next if this is not confronted?"

Vermont Friends of Israel commissioned Hexagonal Sentinel to document this pattern of demonizing rhetoric in Vermont media. The report is available at www.vfi.org/antizionism-in-vermont/jcs-brattleboro-newspapers.

The shop owner, Denise Gebroe, shared the following statement: "I was shaken to find my storefront vandalized with antizionist graffiti, but I am okay and will not be broken. This was an act of intimidation directed at me because I am Jewish. I made Vermont my home because I love it here, but it does not feel the same as it once did. Incidents like this are happening more than many people realize, and most go unreported. I fear for the future of the Jewish community here, and Jewish friends of mine have already left. This was an anti-Jewish hate crime."

Sincerely,
Mark Treinkman, President
Vermont Friends of Israel

Dear Editor,

When people need medical care, they should not assume they must wait weeks or months simply because their regional medical center says no appointments are available. Patients have a right to ask questions, seek alternatives, and learn where timely care may actually be available.

Too often, patients are told only that a clinic is "booking out" without being informed that other hospitals, specialty practices, telehealth providers, urgent care systems, or regional medical centers may have earlier openings. Many people – especially older adults and those with serious medical concerns – do not realize they can call elsewhere, request outside referrals, or ask their insurance company for assistance locating available providers.

Health care systems should be helping patients navigate access to care, not leaving them to figure it out alone. If one office cannot provide timely care, patients deserve honest guidance about other options. Delayed evaluation and treatment can worsen outcomes, increase stress, and ultimately create more costly medical problems.

Patients and families should feel empowered to ask, "Where else can I be seen sooner? Are there other affiliated providers?"

For myself, I would rather drive than wait. After an October 2025 stroke, my husband's initial vision evaluation was scheduled for July 28, 2026! He was more than 50% blinded, but evidently, vision assessment was not a priority. We drove to Albany, N.Y., for assessment in January.

If I had known in November that the credentialed comprehensive stroke center would not provide timely and effective care, I would have started scheduling him elsewhere and started his post-stroke therapy in a timely manner. But regrettably, they were not transparent about the delay, and therapy did not start until I found an outside agency (Weeks and Gowen Physical Therapy – they are great). He has now graduated from physical therapy with measurable vision improvement. I am left to wonder how much more improvement might have been gained if therapy had started during his subacute phase, as clinical guidelines direct.

Sometimes the fastest path to effective care is not the nearest medical center. Patients must learn to advocate for themselves and not to accept unnecessary delays without exploring alternatives.

Sincerely,
Susan Boyer, DNP, MED, RN, FAAN

PROS TO KNOW

Buyer's market or seller's market?

REGION – If you've been watching the housing market lately, you may be wondering whether we're in a buyer's market or a seller's market right now.

For the past few years, sellers have had the clear advantage. Homes moved fast, competition was intense, and buyers often had little room to negotiate. Now, in many areas, the market is starting to feel more balanced. This can change how both buyers and sellers approach their next move.

Seller's market vs. buyer's market

A seller's market happens when there are more buyers than homes for sale. In that kind of market, sellers tend to have more leverage, and buyers often face faster-moving decisions and stronger competition.

A buyer's market is the opposite. It happens when there are more homes for sale than active buyers, which can give buyers more options and more negotiating power.

Most markets are not fully one or the other. They usually fall somewhere in between, and that is what we're seeing more often right now.

What today's market means for buyers

For buyers, a more balanced market can create more flexibility. That may mean more homes to choose from, more time to make a decision, more room to negotiate on price or closing costs, and/or a better chance of finding a home that fits your needs.

That does not mean buyers should assume every seller will negotiate, but it does mean the process may feel more manageable than it did when inventory was tighter and competition was at its peak.

What today's market means for sellers

For sellers, this kind of market does not remove opportunity, but it does make strategy more important.

In a highly competitive seller's market, homes often sold quickly with less effort. In a more balanced market, pricing correctly from the start matters more. So does making sure your home shows well and stands out against the competition.

Homes are still selling, but sellers may need to adjust expectations and pay closer attention to current local conditions.

Why the local market matters most

Housing market conditions can vary widely by city, neighborhood, and price range. While one area may still lean heavily toward sellers, another may be giving buyers more leverage.

That is why national headlines only tell part of the story. What matters most is what is happening in the market where you plan to buy or sell.

I understand the local market, pricing trends, and how quickly homes are moving to provide you with a clearer picture of the opportunities in front of you. Let's work together to create a plan based on your goals, not just the latest headlines.

Efficiency VT Best of the Best awards

S. BURLINGTON, Vt. – More than 840 people gathered for the 2026 Better Building by Design (BBD) conference recently, the region's premier design and construction conference held each year by Efficiency Vermont. Ten organizations were honored with Best of the Best awards for leadership and innovative projects, including the event's first-ever award recognizing a workforce development program.

Architects, designers, builders, contractors, and more from across the northeast gathered at the DoubleTree Hotel & Conference Center in South Burlington, from May 6-7. The theme for this year's event was "Tight Margins, Bold Moves: Building for Affordability, Efficiency, and Electrification." The 10 Best of the Best award winners whose work demonstrated the themes of this year's BBD are Vermont Adult Learning's

Energy Works Program (statewide), Workforce Development Innovation; Lamos Electric (Franklin), Efficiency Excellence Network Partner of the Year; Johnstone Supply (Williston), Efficiency Excellence Network Leadership Award; Champlain Housing Trust and Evernorth for the 10th Cavalry Apartments (Colchester), Affordable Housing Innovation (Multifamily Homes); Cathedral Square for Reid Commons (St. Albans), Performance Excellence (Multifamily Homes); Central Vermont Habitat for Humanity for 41 Central Street (Randolph), Affordable Housing Innovation (Single-Family Homes); Bellwether Craftsmen and New Frameworks for Rose Hill Lane (Shelburne), Performance Excellence (Single-Family Homes); Geobarns LLC, for Farmer and the Bell (Woodstock), Commercial Resilience Champion; Duncan Wisniewski Architecture, Alburgh Family Clubhouse (Alburgh), Small Business Innovation; and Studio III Architecture and Scott + Partners Architecture, BETA Technologies Production Facility (South Burlington), Large Business Innovation.

Attendees shared the latest in energy efficiency practices, strengthened professional connections, and shared insights across nearly 50 conference workshops. More than 60 exhibitors, nonprofits, and other organizations offered interactive learning with building materials, heating systems, and other technologies that improve how homes and buildings use energy.

"Vermont is meeting the energy challenges we face together – collaborating with electric utilities, supporting our weatherization partners, and working with educators, trainers, and employers to grow our climate workforce," said Peter Walke, Efficiency Vermont's managing director, in comments opening the annual event.

Efficiency investments made in 2025 saved Vermonters more than 49,000 megawatt-hours (MWh) of electricity, or enough to power more than 700 homes for a decade, Walke noted. Those investments will save Vermonters $139 million over their lifetime. "It takes coordination across the supply chain and a skilled workforce to design, install, and service these projects to make this kind of durable affordability happen."

This year's BBD keynote speaker was Ellen Kahler, the executive director of the Vermont Sustainable Jobs Fund (VSJF). Kahler's more than two decades leading VSJF make her one of the most influential Vermont voices on sustainable economic development and workforce advancement.

"Building anything well, whether it's a building or a business, takes good leadership, clear communication, a healthy organizational culture, and strong teamwork," Kahler said in an address focused on affordability and resilience in an uncertain market. "You can't control global or national markets...taking care of what you can control will enable you to navigate the uncertainty that will always be there."

The new rule of summer yard care: Let the dogs out

REGION – May is not only prime lawn and gardening time, it's also National Pet Month – the perfect time to celebrate your furry friends and get them back outside to play. A great backyard is more than a place for shade and fun; it's a sanctuary that should offer total peace of mind for the whole family, which includes your pets, too.

Maintain your lawn, keeping it pet-friendly. PHOTO PROVIDED

As outdoor routines shift into high gear, small decisions in how you maintain your yard can have a big impact on your four-legged friends. Luckily, you don't have to choose between a yard that looks beautiful and one that's safe for use around your pets. With the right approach, you can keep your space looking its best while letting the dogs out.

These few thoughtful adjustments can help get your outdoor space in shape for a full season of play.

Rethink what's in your yard

For most dogs, the backyard is their favorite room in the house. Pet-friendly maintenance solutions help keep it a place for play and discovery.

"It's critical for pet parents to keep their pets in mind when choosing lawn or weed control products," says Dr. Marty Becker, Spruce Weed & Grass Killer Alliance member, veterinarian, and pet-wellness expert. "Pets groom themselves and don't bathe as frequently, meaning whatever they're exposed to can remain on their skin and fur for a long period of time."

Weed control without the worry

Maintaining your yard doesn't have to mean sacrificing peace of mind. Weed control options like Spruce Weed & Grass Killer offer an alternative for pet owners looking to simplify their routine. Made with 10 simple ingredients, it's safe for use around people, pets, and bees when used as directed, so your dog can reclaim the yard – playing, rolling around, and exploring every corner – while you keep your yard looking its best all season long.

With visible results in as little as one hour, and dead weeds in just one day, you can spend more time with the people and pets that matter most, rather than on yard work. Plus, it's backed by the Best Friends Animal Society, SPCA Cincinnati, and Fear Free Happy Homes, so pet owners can feel confident using it in their outdoor spaces.

Create a space they'll love

A pet-friendly yard goes beyond lawn and garden care. Designating areas for play, providing shaded spots for rest, and regularly checking for hazards like sharp debris can help create a space where pets can roam freely.

Whether it's National Pet Month or any time of the year, small changes can go a long way in creating a backyard that works for everyone. By choosing smarter ways to prep your space now, you can ensure your four-legged family members spend less time sidelined and more time enjoying the sunshine. After all, a beautiful yard is best enjoyed when every member of the family is free to roam.

Beaver Pond Farm offers fresh produce

NEWPORT, N.H. – Located on the John Stark Highway between Newport and Claremont, N.H., Beaver Pond Farm is a family-run farm offering fresh, high-quality produce and local products. Our retail store sits just five miles from each town and is easy to get to from anywhere in the Upper Valley.

As a diversified farm, we grow a variety of crops and raise livestock, ensuring sustainable practices that support both the land and our community.

Becky (McDonough) Nelson represents the eighth generation of her family to own and work the land at Beaver Pond Farm. Her husband, Ben, oversees farm production, and together they have continued the family tradition since 1984.

Over nine generations, the farm has passed through the hands of both men and women, each dedicated to preserving its legacy. Today, 238 acres of our land are permanently conserved, protecting the farm's rich agricultural heritage for future generations.

In 1984, Becky and Ben partnered with Becky's parents, Fred and Norma McDonough, to officially establish Beaver Pond Farm. What began with baked goods and vegetables sold from a cart soon expanded, leading to the opening of our farm store in 1989. While much has changed over the centuries, our dedication to quality, sustainability, and tradition remains as
