“A MidSummer Night’s Salsa” draws hundreds to the streets of Proctorsville

PROCTORSVILLE, Vt. – What began as an idea to bring neighbors together turned into a celebration that filled Depot Street with music, dancing, laughter, and an estimated 250-300 onlookers and attendees throughout the evening.

“A MidSummer Night’s Salsa,” hosted by Planet Axis, brought people from Proctorsville and communities near and far together for an unforgettable night of dancing in the streets.

Leading the dancing were Julia and Jano Rix, of Embodied Arts by Rix, who welcomed dancers of all experience levels with simple instruction, encouragement, and plenty of positive energy. What began with a beginner class quickly grew into a packed dance floor that continued well into the evening.

The highlight of the night was a spirited Rueda de Casino, a large circle dance that brought dozens of dancers together at once. Surrounded by the music and an enthusiastic crowd, Jano Rix took a moment to reflect on the experience.

“I’ve never seen anything like it in my years of teaching. Dancing in the streets, the freedom, the connection. This is how dancing should be.” Both instructors expressed their amazement at the turnout and the enthusiasm of the community.

The Proctorsville Fire Department helped make the evening possible, bringing two trucks to assist with closing Depot Street and keeping the event safe while the community took over the roadway.

For many, the evening was about more than learning salsa; it was about seeing their community in a different light.

“I have lived here all my life, and I have never seen so many smiles and heard so much laughter in one place. It was a time,” said Proctorsville resident Chris Winot.

Planet Axis organizers Wendy Reynolds and Stefan Beaumont expressed their gratitude to everyone who helped bring the event to life, from the dancers and instructors, to SuperRoasted Coffee Co., volunteers, emergency personnel, the Town of Cavendish, and the Cavendish Community Fund that supported the evening.

“We are incredibly grateful to everyone who showed up and made this happen,” said Reynolds and Beaumont. “It was amazing to watch Depot Street transform into a place where people could simply be together, dance, laugh, and enjoy one another. This was truly a community effort.”

For one summer evening, Depot Street became more than a road. It became a dance floor, a gathering place, and a reminder of what can happen when a community comes together.

And, judging by the smiles, laughter, and packed dance floor, Proctorsville may not be finished dancing yet.

BRIDGEWATER, Vt. – As of Wednesday, Aug. 12, Vermont Route 100 is closed at the Bridge 116 project site to accommodate bridge replacement work. The closure is expected to last 40 days.

For the northbound detour, at Plymouth Union, take Vermont Route 100A North to Bridgewater Corners, then turn west onto U.S. Route 4 to reach West Bridgewater.

For the southbound detour, follow the reverse route: U.S. Route 4 East to Vermont Route 100A South.

Bluegrass in the Green Mountains

BY PAULA BENSON

MANCHESTER CENTER, Vt. – The seventh annual Green Mountain Bluegrass and Roots festival (GMBR) in Hunter Park, Manchester Center, Vt., brought visitors from around the U.S. to immerse themselves in four days of Americana, folk, and bluegrass music.

The performers over the course of the four-day, family-friendly festival, held between Aug. 13-16, included some well-known artists of the genre, like headliners Watchhouse, I’m With Her, and Vermont-born singer and musician Dan Tyminski. A much-anticipated 10-year reunion of Cahlen Morrison and Eli West was just one highlight of the event.

In addition to the packed musical lineup across three stages, attendees were encouraged to camp in one of three camping areas. A variety of local food and craft booths, Vermont craft beer, wine, and spirits, a kids’ corner, and daily community experiences like dance and yoga classes were part of the festivities.

By Saturday afternoon, RVs were crowded in the Hunter Park South camping area, and families cooled off in a small swimming hole just off site in the Battenkill

River. Camp chairs lined up in front of the main stage staking out space in anticipation of the evening’s performances, but a good-sized crowd sat in the sunshine, listening to the day’s main stage artists.

Jill and John Turpin, the festival’s promoters, share a passion for bluegrass, the artists, and the communal experience of a music festival. The stated mission of GMBR is “Community. Collaboration. Inspiration.”

“Since the first bluegrass festivals were introduced in the ‘60s, loyal fans of the music have gathered, often with campers and folding chairs in tow, to listen to old-school and new-school pickers play,” reads the GMBR mission statement. “Beyond the pure talent represented by these performers, there was a rapport, a clear and special bond that they shared, that was evident to all who were lucky enough to bear witness to one of these special collaborations. Our mission is to help bring together the titans of today’s bluegrass, roots, and Americana music, both known and unknown, and provide them with a fertile field that will foster nothing short of a new golden era of musical collaboration.”

That was the energy of the day, evident in the crowds of festivalgoers gathered in cheerful groups, reuniting with old friends, laughing, sharing an appreciation of Americana music, and enjoying a gorgeous August day among the Green Mountains of southern Vermont.

CORRECTION:

In the July 29 edition of The Vermont Journal, in the “Londonderry hears from post office building owners, general office manager article postponed indefinitely” meeting coverage, it was reported that the Londonderry municipal tax rates were “lowered” using surplus funds from the past two years. More accurately stated, the town used money from the general fund to reduce the amount by which the 2026-2027 municipal tax rate will increase, from 75 cents to 70 cents.

Cryptids in the Mountains

ANDOVER, Vt. – Cryptids in the Mountains is a cryptozoology conference happening in beautiful Andover, Vt. On Aug. 29 and 30, you can come listen to speakers, shop at local vendor tents, enjoy documentaries, have a tasty bite to eat, play some trivia, and even win some raffles.

Cryptids in the Mountains will be taking place at The Inn Between & Which Way Tavern, 1834 Simonsville

Road in Andover, Vt. Saturday will begin at 9 a.m. and conclude at 6 p.m. Cryptid trivia will begin at 6:30 p.m., in the tavern. Sunday will begin at 9 a.m. and conclude at 5:30 p.m. Our speakers include names like Ronny LeBlanc, who was on Travel Channel's "Expedition Bigfoot."

Cryptozoology is the study of hidden animals. You might know the more famous cryptids, like Bigfoot, Mothman, and the Loch Ness monster – Vermont even has our beloved Champ, the Lake Champlain monster – but there are so many more. There are legends of these creatures all around the world, and events like this one help expand that knowledge and culture to local areas. We have a lot to discover on our planet. Some creatures are just still hiding.

Okemo Valley Women's Club Yard and Bake Sale

LUDLOW, Vt. – The Okemo Valley Women's Club (OVWC) will hold its annual fundraising Yard and Bake Sale on Saturday, Aug. 22, from 9 a.m. – 2 p.m., on the lawn in front of the Okemo Mountain School, 53 Main Street in Ludlow, Vt.

The Okemo Valley Women's Club is a local organization which supports the local community through several ongoing projects, including a local high school scholarship, a statewide scholarship to assist women returning to the workplace, an educational magazine donated to local schools, and help for local families to provide for their children during the holidays. OVWC focuses on national and international issues such as food insecurity, sexual abuse, and crisis, and supports several national and international organizations through volunteerism and donation.

The yard and bake sale is one of several annual fundraising activities which the club holds to benefit its many community projects. The support it receives for these events benefits the entire community.

The Okemo Valley Women's Club is a General Federation of Women's Clubs (GFWC) club. GFWC is an international women's organization dedicated to community improvement by enhancing the lives of others through volunteer service.

MVSD analysis shows cost of government inaction

WOODSTOCK, Vt. – A new report from Mountain Views Supervisory District (MVSD) tallies the cost to taxpayers of withholding Vermont State Government approval for the district's previously approved, shovel-ready plans to replace its failing middle school and high school building at a cost of $21 million by 2029. The report was prepared by MVSD's new director of finance and operations, Mary Henry, a veteran of 30 years in finance and education and a longtime protege of recently retired District Finance Director James Fenn.

According to the Vermont secretary of education, Zoie Saunders, the state cannot approve any district for school construction aid until the program rules for the appropriation of state construction grants have been written and adopted – even though grants of up to 30% of construction costs were defined with the passage of Act 170 in June. Legislators deferred establishing such rules within the content of Act 170, instead passing the task of rulemaking to the Vermont Agency of Education (AOE). The AOE has stated that the process could take up to three years.

An initial project estimate prior to a first bond vote, defeated by voters in 2024, came to $100 million. By March 2026, when voters resoundingly approved a second bond to finance the rebuild, inflation had raised the cost for the project by a full 12%, to $112 million. Calculating inflation increases at 6% annually, the same rebuild project would reach a cost of $133.39 million by 2029, the report said, or a 33% increase from 2024.

The study also calculated the cost to taxpayers of repairs and equipment replacements needed to keep the school open over the next five years, basing estimates on a statewide AOE Schools Facilities Assessment prepared by Bureau Veritas for the State of Vermont in 2023. That study concluded that the Woodstock Union High School and Middle School building "has reached the end of its useful or serviceable life.

Renewal is now necessary."

Over the past five years, the district has spent $5 million to address immediate facility repairs and equipment replacements. Projecting another five years into the future, the district's capital improvement plan estimates that work to keep the building operating will exceed $13 million.

Finally, the new MVSD report considers the additional costs likely if portions or all of the existing building become unsustainable, forcing the use of temporary student classroom facilities – trailer classrooms – that would be placed on the football field (ultimately the site of the new school). Total cost to taxpayers of such temporary classrooms is estimated at $2.4 million.

"While the proposed $13 million in facility improvements addresses what we see as immediate needs over the next five years, there's nothing about such expenditures that changes the fact that our building has reached the end of its useful life," said Henry. "Furthermore, it's important for taxpayers to recognize that under Vermont's new school-construction funding formula, the financial impact of our situation is shared statewide. This is a statewide funding issue, not just a Woodstock issue."

To prevent the scenario defined in the new report,

MVSD's plans include working with both legislators and the governor's office to seek immediate preliminary approvals that would allow the new construction to begin without the possible loss of state construction funding later, said Keri Bristow, MVSD chair. "The district has reminded legislators and the AOE that it has worked in compliance with Vermont's government at multiple levels to replace its crumbling school for a decade," said Bristow. "The school building is now one of the worst cases of facility deterioration in Vermont by the state's own 2023 assessments – and that's a long and expensive three years ago."

LTE: Rick Martin on Route 100 bridge closure

Gov. Scott,

On Aug. 12, the construction project for the replacement of the bridge on Route 100 began.

As of day 3 of construction, as expected, we are down over 10% in sales as compared to 2025. As a result, the state has lost tax revenue on 10% of sales, the Town of Plymouth has lost 10% in tax dollars due to less traffic, and we are going to shorten hours at Chloe's Market. Our employees will suffer due the closures and lost wages as well.

unaffordability in Vermont, as the ripple effect of cutting of access to one of the most traversed highways in the state during peak tourism is now having extreme consequences.

So much for this legislature looking out for the working class. If this was in Woodstock, all hell would break loose. Residents and visitors have been coming into the store by the dozens expressing their anger and disgust with the Vermont Agency of Transportation.

This is a poor reflection on elected officials who approve such projects without considering the devastating impact on the local economy and the people who voted them into office.

All the elected officials are continuing to lament the loss of jobs, cost of housing, and lost revenue. This project is a prime example of how the Vermont Agency of Transportation (VTrans) has adversely affected the local economy, and of its utter disrespect for the hardworking people of Vermont.

Vermont is bleeding population, has the highest education taxes in the country for the lowest number of students, and continues to fail to support those residents who are the lifeblood of revenue in the state. These types of projects continue to contribute to the increase of

As you all know, this project proceeded against the united vocal opposition and concerns of residents in Plymouth, Killington, and other surrounding towns. I will be sending out an email every day to show how this project has adversely affected local businesses.

Not only will the State of Vermont be losing tax revenue because of reduced sales at the store, but I also have employees who now must shell out hundreds of dollars more to navigate the detour that has been put in place. Some may not even be able to get to work because of lack of transportation.

As a reminder of how this all came to be: In Fall 2024, during a selectboard meeting at the Town of Plymouth's offices, representatives from Vermont Agency of Transportation presented a plan to repair bridges in the area. One of the major concerns raised was that there were no plans to have a one-lane access put in place during construction. Not one of the representatives even considered this matter. We were told that VTrans would come back with a more comprehensive plan to address our concerns.

This closure will cause severe damage to workers at the store, who cannot drive and depend on local rides to get to the workplace.

We all understand the need to repair our bridges and roads, but there must be contingency plans in place to mitigate safety concerns, economic losses, and the impact on residents. None of this has been done.

There were elected officials who championed the installation of a one-lane bypass over the Quechee Gorge during replacement of that bridge. Said elected officials have not been involved in this matter, and residents are

Gov. Scott, Lt. Gov. Rogers, and Rep. Kimbell, I applaud you all for your efforts to change the status quo in Montpelier, however, this is just more of the same incompetent management at VTrans. This construction project is a prime example of VTrans' lack of compassion and inability to pay heed to the needs of its constituents.

We were hoping to come to a resolution that would ensure that the much-needed bridge repairs are completed without sacrificing the livelihoods of residents and businesses.

These closures on Route 100, especially the one planned to close over the Labor Day weekend, will be a death knell for many businesses. This is our busiest time of the year, and my employees may be out of work if I have to close the business due to poor sales, as I will not be able to afford to pay them. Gas prices are high, and people are now being expected to shoulder another financial burden forced upon them by the State of Vermont.

There is an election coming up, and this will be high on the agenda for those of us who will not forget that Plymouth residents were thrown to the wayside just to use FEMA money to fix bridges and cause such economic devastation to the local business community.

We will also be looking to ensure that Vermont Agency of Transportation is held accountable for mishandling of the project, and demanding that new leadership be put in place.

You all will be receiving an update every day, and I expect that there will be significant blowback over this entire joke of a project.

Sincerely,
Rick Martin, President

New artwork on display at Canal Street Gallery —

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt. – Canal Street Art Gallery presents new artwork from Nancy Fitz-Rapalje, Kim Grall, and Edward Kingsbury III, open Aug. 21 – Oct. 11. Join the gallery on Aug. 21, from 5-7 p.m., for Bellows Falls Third Friday and an opening reception for the artists. All gallery events are free and open to the public; for wheelchair accessibility, call 802-289-0104.

Fitz-Rapalje, based in Bellows Falls, Vt., presents paintings from some of her familiar subjects, such as floral still lifes, peaches, and apples. Made in her calculated, geometric style of brushstrokes, Fitz-Rapalje employs her well-known top-down perspective, thereby flattening the background and focusing on placed objects. Fitz-Rapalje, referring to her paintings as “sketches,” describes her practice of painting quickly from observation as “a quick drilling of the eye and a short alla prima battle.” For the artist, the finished painting then becomes a reminder of that day when she really looked, and thus is reinvigorated to do it again.

Grall, based in Westminster Station, Vt., creates two- and three-dimensional artworks expressing the artist’s connection with nature through the use of many natural materials which the artist grows, forages, and makes herself, such as beeswax; earth pigments; plant-based, handmade papers; raw fleece; leaves; feathers; and grasses. Most recently, Grall is making marbled, handmade papers. The artist also uses techniques such as pyrography, painting, and collage to make representations of scenes from the world, focused on birds, bugs, amphibians, and native plants where the wetland meets the forest.

Kingsbury, based in Keene, N.H., shows new abstract acrylic paintings, studies in color and pattern and the practice of making art as prayer. The resulting paintings are Kingsbury’s abstract representation of God. The artist’s paintings are intricate line-made structures layered with opaque and translucent color, and all-over applications creating luminous woven surfaces.

Canal Street Art Gallery is located at 23 Canal Street in historic downtown Bellows Falls, Vt., and is open Tuesday-Saturday, from 10 a.m. – 5 p.m.; Sunday, from 11 a.m. – 4 p.m.; and the third Friday of every month, from 10 a.m. – 7 p.m. For more information about the above solo shows, visit www.canalstreetartgallery.com, call 802-289-0104, or email artinfo@canalstreetartgallery.com.

LAHS issues open call for artworks

LONDONDERRY, Vt. – The Londonderry Arts and Historical Society is pleased to announce its annual Local Artist Show at the Custer Sharp House, 2461 Middletown Road in Londonderry. This year we are excited to open the show up to crafters, and welcome any and all crafts, including jewelry.

The show opens on Sept. 5, with an opening party on Sept. 11, from 5-7 p.m.

We are looking for artists who would like to join us. Please bring framed art or other types of art, ready to display or hang. We prefer wire on the back if possible. Please put the name of your piece, medium used, and your information (name, address, phone number, and email address) on the back of your piece. If you are a crafter, you may bring a rack or something to use for display. We do have some spaces that will work well for displaying.

The requirement is 30 by 30 inches maximum size. We will also accept needlework, jewelry, cards, and matted prints.

Receiving dates will be Saturdays and Wednesdays, from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m., through Aug. 22. You must fill out either the online form, or bring the physical form listing your name, address, phone number, title of the work, and medium. Please also label the work on the back. Pickup will be during the week following closing.

Fairy House builders, volunteers

GRAFTON, Vt. – The Nature Museum in Grafton is preparing for its biggest event of the year, the Fairy House Festival, to be held on Saturday, Sept. 26, and Sunday, Sept. 27. People from all over New England travel to Grafton to explore the enchanted Fairy Trail and see the magnificent village created by our local school classrooms, neighbors, organizations, and businesses.

This festival and fundraiser is only possible due to the imagination and generosity of our community, and we invite you to join us as a builder or event volunteer to help us host this regional treasure.

This year, we’re excited to welcome the community to our new native gardens and gathering spaces. We have returning performers, and visitors can also look forward to expanded local merchants and food options. The theme for this year’s festival is “Village Life.”

Student volunteers can receive community service hours for their efforts helping a local nonprofit. Learn more about volunteering at www.nature-museum.org/fairy-house-festival/volunteer. You can also learn more about being a builder at www.nature-museum.org/fairy-house-festival/builder.

Festival ticket sales begin in mid-August. Please plan to purchase your tickets online ahead of time.

FOLA to screen classic “Safety Last”

LUDLOW, Vt. – It’s a cinematic image so powerful, people who’ve never seen the movie instantly recognize it; Harold Lloyd hanging from the hands of a huge clock, from the climax of his silent comedy “Safety Last” (1923), has emerged as a symbol of early Hollywood and movie magic.

See for yourself with a screening of “Safety Last” on Saturday, Aug. 22, at 7 p.m., in the Heald Auditorium at the Ludlow Town Hall, 37 Depot Street in Ludlow, Vt.

Presented by the Friends of Ludlow Auditorium (FOLA), the screening will feature accompaniment by Jeff Rapsis, a New Hampshire-based composer who specializes in creating live music for silent film presentations. Admission is free and all are welcome to this family-friendly event. Donations are accepted at the door to support the Friends of Ludlow Auditorium.

“Safety Last” follows young go-getter Lloyd to the big city, where he hopes to make his mark in business, then send for his small-town sweetheart. His career at a downtown department store stalls, however, until he gets a chance to pitch a surefire publicity idea: Hire a human fly to climb the building’s exterior. But when the human fly has a last-minute run-in with the law, Lloyd is forced to make the climb himself, floor by floor, with his sweetheart looking on. The result is an extended sequence filmed without trick photography that blends comedy and terror, holding viewers spellbound.

Lloyd, along with Charlie Chaplin and Buster Keaton, is regarded as one of the silent screen’s three great clowns.

Lloyd’s character, an ambitious young man ready to struggle to win the day, proved hugely popular in the 1920s. While Chaplin and Keaton were always favored by the critics, Lloyd’s films reigned as the top-grossing comedies throughout the period.

Rapsis will create a musical score for the film live during its screening, in the manner of theater organists during silent cinema’s peak years in the 1920s.

“For most silent films, there was never any sheet music and no official score,” Rapsis said, “so creating original music on the spot to help the film’s impact is all part of the experience.”

“That’s one of the special qualities of silent cinema,” Rapsis continued. “Although the films themselves are often over a century old, each screening is a unique experience – a combination of the movie, the music, and the audience reaction.”

For more information on this screening, call 802-228-3238. For more information on the music, visit www.jeffrapsis.com.

Poetry reading at the Grafton Public Library

GRAFTON, Vt. – Please join the Grafton Public Library on Tuesday, Aug. 25, from 6:30-8 p.m., for an evening with three Vermont poets, as part of our ongoing Neighbor-to-Neighbor Discussion Series.

Brattleboro poet Tim Mayo will read from his latest poetry collection, “Muscle Memories of Love and Disaster,” exploring grief, loss, mortality, the suffering and hopes of the mentally ill, and the rebirth of falling in love late in life.

Grafton poet Nancy Richardson’s poems concern the politics and personalities of our time. Richardson’s book “An Everyday Thing,” about the shootings at Kent State University, was named one the 100 best independent books of 2018 by Kirkus.

And our third voice, known to many in the area, offers this invitation: “Bill Toomey, a Grafton man, has been writing what he thinks is poetry for all his life. But is it? He invites you to judge.”

There will be time for a Q&A session after the readings, and signed copies of books will be available for purchase. Light refreshments will be served. Registration is strongly suggested for this event, as seating is limited and the program will not be recorded. Please email librarian@graffton-publiclibrary.org to register.

OLLI fall 2026 schedule —

SPRINGFIELD, Vt. – Springfield Osher Lifelong Learning Institute (OLLI) is pleased to announce its fall 2026 programs. The first program, on Tuesday, Sept. 15, will be about Ira Allen and the Green Mountain Frontier, presented by Vermont historian Kevin Graffagnino.

Registration is now open, and you can register online at www.learn.uvm.edu/olli/springfield. You must pre-register and prepay to attend. Registration and payment cannot be accepted at the event. You can preregister now for the full series as a member. Beginning Aug. 25 and continuing throughout the semester, you may register for individual programs if you wish to choose only certain ones to attend. OLLI is run by local volunteers who believe in providing interesting educational and cultural programs to the community. Springfield OLLI is in its 23rd year and has continued to grow in popularity over the years. It serves the greater Springfield area, with members coming from a wide area encompassing southern Vermont and New Hampshire. It is a nationwide program which provides learning “for the fun of it” at an affordable price for older adults. Vermont’s OLLI is supported by the University of Vermont. The group meets on Tuesdays, at 2 p.m., at the Nolin Murray Center in Springfield. Following is a look at the other programs. More detail can be found at the above website. On Sept. 28, Nadine Buddbill will discuss her father’s legacy with “The Poetry of a Place and its People: David Buddbill’s ‘Judevine.’” On Oct. 13, “Eyes to the Sky” with Candace Hess, co-sponsored by the Ascutney Mountain Audubon Society, will highlight hawk-watcher volunteers in California and a look at the local Putney Mountain hawk-watchers. On Oct. 27, Garrett Graff, historian and journalist, will discuss “The Midterm Elections and Beyond: America’s Path Forward.” On Nov. 17, Ethan Tapper, forester and ecologist, will discuss “The Forest Year” and give an in-depth look at his new book by that title. On Dec. 1, Mark Breen will return for his 15th annual presentation to the group as “The Singing Weatherman,” combining his passion for meteorology and music by presenting his collection of songs about the weather. Come join this exciting educational OLLI group to learn about interesting details on a variety of topics.

Diversion in conversation

SPRINGFIELD, Vt. – Join Brandon Sheridan, Jon Bautel, and Beth Kopp from Valley Court Diversion Programs (VCDP) on Tuesday, Sept. 1, at 6 p.m., at the Springfield Town Library, for an engaging panel discussion, in which they will share insights into restorative justice, diversion programs, and the real-world impact of their work. The conversation will explore challenges, successes, and the importance of community-based approaches to justice, followed by an opportunity for audience questions and dialogue.

Sheridan, tamarack and pretrial services coordinator, joined VCDP in April 2025. He is a passionate advocate for mental health treatment and restorative justice, with years of experience supporting individuals with intellectual disabilities and mental health challenges. Bautel, balanced and restorative justice case manager, is committed to fostering personal growth and strengthening community resilience. He is currently pursuing a master’s degree in clinical mental health counseling at the University of the Southwest. His background includes restorative justice, mediation, and youth advocacy, with experience facilitating programs across Michigan.

Kopp, driver’s license suspension and adult diversion case manager, joined VCDP in winter 2025 as a license reinstatement and diversion specialist. Previously working with the Vermont Treatment Court, she brings valuable experience and a continued dedication to restorative justice practices as she takes on new challenges. Together, they offer a thoughtful, restorative approach to supporting individuals and building stronger communities. Windham County Humane Society “Hot Firefighter Pet Calendar” —

REGION – The Windham County Humane Society (WCHS) just announced that presales are open for its highly anticipated, first ever “Hot Firefighter Pet Calendar” for 2027. WCHS teamed up with five local fire departments – Wilmington, Rockingham, Dummerston, Whitingham, and Brattleboro – to create a professional calendar featuring animal heroes posing with shelter dogs and cats that’s as hot and adorable as it sounds.

“I think this is a great idea to help the animals at WCHS, and I’m proud our department is involved,” said Wilmington Fire Department Chief Scott Moore. “We’re all animal lovers, and we’re happy to help the animals at the Windham County Humane Society however we can,” said Dummerston Fire Department Deputy Chief Leon Dunbar. Calendars are on sale now at www.windham-countyhumane.org. Calendars will arrive to WCHS by Oct. 15, and can be picked up at the shelter or mailed to you for a fee. “I had high hopes for this calendar, but it’s 1,000 times better than I dreamed,” said WCHS Marketing Manager Violet Zarriello. “We wanted to keep it fresh and interesting, so we staged creative scenarios, including a dog picnic, a doggy spa day, and a kitten ‘library.’ Each photo is guaranteed to make you smile.” WCHS’ goal is to raise $30,000 for shelter pets with calendar sales. “Every calendar you purchase will provide essential care, supplies, and services to the thousands of animals we have the privilege of caring for each year,” said WCHS Executive Director Maya Richmond. “This is a fun and creative way to help the animals while showing some love to our amazing first responders. We’re so grateful for their kindness, and to our community for supporting everything we do.” WCHS does more than just adoptions, and every service is funded by donations. It offers spay/neuter services, vaccine and nail trim clinics, microchipping services, flea and tick preventatives, a pet food pantry, and wellness appointments for Pet Care Assistance (PCA) clients. Already in 2026, WCHS has placed 465 pets in new adopted homes and performed 995 spay and neuter surgeries. It has taken its services mobile with vaccine clinics, and offered free spay and neuter surgeries to Tri-Park residents. Animals arrive at WCHS as strays, owner surrenders, transports from other states, or when they are removed from an unsafe situation by animal control. Many are sick, almost all need vaccines and spay/neuter surgery, and every single one needs extra tender love and care before they are ready to meet their new families. Animals stay at WCHS for as long as they need to be before finding their forever homes.

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt. – Arnold Knowlton, cherished husband, devoted father, beloved grandfather, and Vietnam veteran, passed away peacefully on Aug. 7, 2026, after a courageous battle with an illness. Born on Dec. 12, 1944, in the picturesque town of Lancaster, N.H., Arnold's life was a testament to resilience, love, and unwavering dedication to those he held dear.

Arnold graduated from Groveton High School in 1962, graduated from Plymouth State College in 1968 with a bachelor's degree in teaching, and graduated from Hesser College in 1976 with an associate's degree in business science. After a short time in teaching, he changed his profession to food service, which he did until he retired. After he retired, he drove for the Moover, transporting people to their appointments.

Arnold was the treasured son of Clement and Eva Knowlton, of North Stratford, N.H., who preceded him in death. He shared a remarkable life journey with his beloved wife, Lorraine (Gagnon), to whom he was devoted for 58 long and happy years. Their marriage, which began on Sept. 12, 1968, was a beacon of true joy and happiness, and together they built a life filled with cherished memories and lasting love.

A man of quiet strength and boundless love, Arnold leaves behind a legacy through his children, Jessica, Jennifer, Scott, and Christopher. His brothers were Stephen and Roger. His family was his pride and joy, and he was a constant source of guidance and support. Arnold's gentle spirit and kind heart also touched the lives of his 10 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren, who will carry forward his values and love in the years to come.

Arnold's life was marked by a profound sense of community and generosity. He was known for his warm smile, genuine kindness, and ability to connect with people from all walks of life. His presence enriched the lives of many, and his memory will be cherished by those who had the privilege of knowing him.

Arnold Knowlton will be remembered as a man of great integrity, love, and unwavering dedication to his family and community. His absence leaves a void that will be deeply felt, but his legacy of love and kindness will remain a guiding light for all who knew him.

opinion/classifieds

Dear Editor,

Kendra Rickerby’s letter of Aug. 12 about the Vermont Department of Education encouraging the use of AI in Vermont school systems and in the classroom is built on deceptive grounds. She has succumbed to one of the ploys the Wall Street gamers use to keep the AI bubble from bursting.

It was Wall Street hedge funds that invented “Democrats for Education Reform” when George W. Bush instituted the “Race to the Top.” Its purpose was not to promote better education, but to profit from the creation of the standardized testing industry. It is now the tech industry which is seeking to find some sort of profitability in a consistently unprofitable wild goose chase by tapping into the last vast reservoir of public funding: the public education industry.

The first test of AI as a help to students proved it a massive failure. A UMass study showed so, www.gazettenet.com/2025/11/07/use-of-ai-in-the-classroom-doesnt-lead-to-higher-grades-umass-study-says. And, to quote Elizabeth Laird, director of the Equity in Civic Technology Project at the Center for Democracy and Technology, “Our research shows AI use in schools comes with real risks, like large-scale data breaches, tech-fueled sexual harassment and bullying, and treating students unfairly.”

As for using it in school administration, there are two fatal flaws.

First, just like driverless cars, it will never have the subtlety of information processing that the human brain has. Just like the Waymo taxis on the streets of Los Angeles, it will need a human operator to correct its deficiencies from moment to moment.

Second, to even promote AI as a solution is to completely miss Vermont’s real problem with education: The system as it is focuses on cost effectiveness rather than educational effectiveness. Nobody educates anybody well by focusing on costs. Humans are too diverse in essence to be treated like parts on an assembly line. The individualized approach to each one is necessary, and the people who understand that are teachers. Rather than prioritizing costs, we should give the teachers what they need.

One of the few high government officials to realize the value of education was Reagan’s Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinburger. When strategists suggested that Head Start be eliminated so the money could be used to build more missiles, he squashed the idea. He knew how valuable Head Start was. Thirty years later, a study confirmed what Weinburger had felt: Adults who had attended Head Start programs in their toddler years had led far more law-abiding lives than their peers, consistently.

It is time to break the Wall Street profit-and-loss shackles. We must stop evaluating education by a balance sheet, empower teachers to use their professional skills, and judge by the long-term results: where the children arrive decades later.

Sincerely,
Chuck Gregory
Springfield, Vt.

A fed bear is a dead bear

REGION – In Stowe recently, the Vermont Department of Fish & Wildlife authorized the killing of a bear that had grown dangerously comfortable seeking food around people from homes and businesses. If the past few years are any indication, by the end of summer we will have had to put down or provide similar authorizations for dozens more bears to end acute conflicts that threaten human safety.

No one wants this outcome for Vermont’s bears, but when Vermonters fail to put proactive coexistence measures in place before bears learn that our homes and villages are good places to find food, this is the predictable outcome. This challenge is not limited to Stowe or even to mountain towns. Except for the Champlain Islands, if you live in Vermont, you live in bear country, and Vermonters are collectively failing our bears.

We say “collectively” because whole communities teach bears where to find food, not just individual households. It is tempting to blame one family’s birdfeeder or one business’s dumpster, but bears are more adaptable than this. Our neighborhoods need to be in lockstep taking down birdfeeders when the snow melts and keeping trashcans and totes stored inside until immediately prior to pickup on trash day, and our downtowns need to present a unified front of well-secured dumpsters.

A bear that finds an easy meal when one house leaves their garbage out overnight will soon test other houses. Vermont’s bears mastered strategies like this over many years, and have now passed their knowledge on to multiple generations of cubs.

Bears are not at fault for these behaviors. Creativity, group learning, and tenacity are simply their nature. These are also the qualities that inspire our affinity and respect for bears. Humans are to blame when we collectively create situations that encourage bears to take risks and then fail to correct our mistakes quickly enough for coexistence to work.

Over the past several decades, our department’s approach to human-bear coexistence has centered on creating the conditions for our bear population to thrive and providing the information and assistance for Vermonters to voluntarily keep bears wild.

We conserve thousands of acres of remote bear habitat, place hundreds of “Keep Bears Wild” signs in communities across the state, partner with the nationally recognized non-profit BearWise on print materials to share at workshops and community gatherings, and publish extensive coexistence resources online. We invite bear coexistence news coverage each spring and throughout the summer, support peer-learning networks on living in bear country, and oversee a sustainable, regulated bear hunt every fall.

Our biologists and game wardens annually field upwards of a thousand inquiries about living with bears, conduct hundreds of site visits to provide on-the-ground coexistence advice, and, in serious cases, wardens issue citations when bears are being intentionally fed. Even so, both the number and severity of bear incidents are escalating, putting both bears and humans at risk.

Today, Vermont is home to as many as 8,000 bears, substantially more than in the past, but whether those encounters become conflicts has less to do with bear numbers than with what people do or don’t do. Human behavior, and specifically our ability to make good on the shared responsibility of living in bear country, is the single most important factor.

Put simply, Vermont’s bear population is thriving, and we need Vermonters to meet a higher standard as stewards of our bears. If we cannot change course together, then Vermont will continue to play out the grim adage: a fed bear is a dead bear.

PROS TO KNOW

Overcome homeownership FOMO

REGION – It’s easy to feel like everyone has homeownership figured out. Someone you know just bought their first house, a neighbor is renovating their kitchen, one of your friends is talking about their equity. Maybe this has you thinking, “Am I behind? Should I be doing something right now?”

I hear this more often than you might think, but the truth is that homeownership looks different for everyone. While someone is buying their first home, someone else is wondering how to use their home equity.

Since June is National Homeownership Month, I wanted to take a minute to remind you to stop comparing your situation to ev-everyone else’s and walk you through how to take control of your own.

If you’re thinking about buying

A lot of buyers start by looking at homes online. And, while this part is fun, it’s not the first step you need to take. A better way to get started is to find out what you can afford.

When you apply online, I can review your financial information and talk through your goals to help you get a better idea of what options may be available to you. From there, I can guide you through how the mortgage process works, what documents you may need, and what kind of monthly payment range feels realistic for you.

Don’t feel like you have to have it all figured out on your own. I’m here to help you navigate the homebuying process.

If you already own a home

Owning a home doesn’t mean the conversation is over after closing. A lot can change over time, including your home’s value, your loan balance, your budget, and what you need from your home. That’s why it can be helpful to check in on your mortgage from time to time. Not because something is wrong, but because you deserve to know what options you may have waiting for you.

You may have more equity than you realize, especially if you’ve owned your home for a while or your home’s value has changed. My refinance calculator can help give you a quick ballpark figure of what you could potentially save each month. It’s not a final answer, but it is a good starting point.

You don’t have to figure it out alone

Homeownership FOMO usually shows up when you have just enough information to feel behind, but not enough information to know what to do next. That’s where I can help.

If you’re thinking about buying, we can look at what may be possible and what steps make sense from here. If you already own a home, we can talk through where your mortgage stands today and whether there’s anything worth looking at more closely.

Contact me today to talk through your questions and get a clearer idea of what could come next.

“Vermont Civilian Conservation Corps Camps”

REGION – Historian Martin Podskoch’s book “Vermont Civilian Conservation Corps Camps: History, Memories & Legacy of the CCC” was released in August 2026. The book describes the history of the 36 Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) camps and supply depots where young men aged 18-25 years and World War I veterans built dams, state parks, and state forests from 1933-1942.

For the past four years, Podskoch has visited and explored the 36 Vermont CCC camps and gathered the camps’ histories and photographs from historical societies, museums, libraries, personal interviews, and state and college archives. Families of CCC young men and veterans who worked in Vermont state parks and forest shared their relatives’ memories and photos of camp life and work projects.

The Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) began on March 31, 1933, under President Franklin Roosevelt’s New Deal to relieve the poverty and unemployment of the Great Depression. Workers built trails, roads, campsites, and dams; stocked fish; and built and maintained fire towers, observer’s cabins, and telephone lines. They also fought fires and planted millions of trees. The CCC disbanded in 1942 due to the need for men in World War II.

Brian Lindner, native Vermonter and historian, stated, “At a time when the Great Depression was crushing the dreams of Americans, President Roosevelt created the Civilian Conservation Corps. Vermont State Forester Perry Merrill saw its potential and successfully lobbied Washington with a long list of ‘shovel-ready’ projects that created the state park system, hiking trails, forest fire protections, streambed improvements, and reforestation projects. These helped make Vermont a leader in the sport of skiing and outdoor recreation.”

The history of the following 36 Vermont towns with CCC camps and supply depots is told in Podskoch’s book: Barre Supply Depot, Bellows Falls, Bethel, Brunswick, Colchester Supply Depot, Colchester Army, Cuttingsville/Shrewsbury, Danby/Mount Tabor, East Barre, East Burke, East Wallingford/Weston, Elmore, Jericho/Firing Range, Ludlow, Marshfield/Groton, Mendon, Middlesex, Milton, Montpelier/Middlesex/Wrightsville, Montpelier/McKee, Moscow, Northfield, North Thetford, Peru, Plymouth, Poultney, Ricker Mills, Rochester, Saint Albans, Sharon, Underhill Center/Firing Range, Waterbury/Village, Waterbury/Dam, West Burke/Sutton, Wilmington, and Windsor.

“Marty Podskoch has been researching Vermont’s CCC camps for many years, and this book provides a comprehensive history of them,” said Lyman Orton, proprietor of The Vermont Country Store. “Many of the trails at Bromley ski area were built by the CCC. The dirt road from Landgrove to Mount Tabor on Route 7 was worked on by CCC crews, and my father pointed out the excellent job they did, as evidenced by the good condition the road was in compared with some town roads that did not hold up as well. My father told me, ‘Those boys knew how to put down a good base,’ and it still rings in my ears.”

Podskoch is a retired teacher from Delhi, N.Y., in the Catskill Mountains, and the author of 12 books. He also writes a weekly column called “Adirondack Stories” in five Adirondack newspapers. Podskoch and his wife, Lynn, live in Easton, Conn. For more information, Podskoch can be contacted at 860-267-2442 or podskoch@comcast.net. The book is available from the author, and at book stores, The Vermont Country Store, and Amazon.

Blue Flames Steel Band on the Weston Green

WESTON, Vt. – Come to Weston’s Town Green on Saturday, Aug. 22, from 4-6 p.m., for a special Blue Flames Steel Band concert. Bring a picnic, family, and friends, and listen to some wonderful music thanks to the enchanting Blue Flames Steel Band, who for the 16th year are donating their talent and goodwill to this festive community celebration. One hundred forty years ago, nine pioneer women turned a smelly frog pond and muddy swamp into what is now called the most beautiful town green in Vermont. The “Ladies of the Green,” in the spirit of their ancestors, welcome all to join in sharing their spirit of community and to provide some assistance to help our beloved playhouse recover from the devastating floods of 2023. All contributions will benefit the Weston Community Association’s restoration of the Weston Playhouse.

WOOLstock presents seven hours of music

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt. – Black Sheep Radio (WOOL FM) invites music lovers from across the region to celebrate community, live music, and local radio at WOOLstock 2026, taking place Saturday, Aug. 22, from 1-9 p.m., at the Bellows Falls Waypoint Center. Inspired by the spirit of the original Woodstock, WOOLstock offers seven hours of peace, love, and music featuring an outstanding lineup of regional performers, food, local beverages, and family-friendly fun.

This year’s performers include Man-Made Tragedies, The Milkhouse Heaters, Rustie Bus, and Chodus. WOOL-FM DJs will keep the energy flowing with live sets between performances throughout the day. In addition to great music, attendees can enjoy food from Smokin’ Bowls, beer and cider from 7 Balls Brewing, raffles, and prizes. Admission is reasonably priced, and children under 12 are admitted free, making WOOLstock an affordable day of entertainment for the entire family.

WOOLstock is both a celebration of local music and a fundraiser supporting WOOL FM Black Sheep Radio, the region’s volunteer-powered community radio station. Proceeds help the station continue providing diverse programming, local news, public affairs, and independent music throughout the Connecticut River Valley. For more information about WOOLstock and WOOL FM, visit www.blacksheepradio.org.

Jane Kolias’ “METALSUM” opens at NXT Gallery

PUTNEY, Vt. – Next Stage Arts invites the public to celebrate the opening of “METALSUM,” a new exhibition by Putney artist Jane Kolias, whose inventive sculptures and metal quilts transform discarded objects into compelling works of art. An opening reception will be held Saturday, Aug. 29, from 4-6 p.m., at NXT Gallery, located at Next Stage Arts, 15 Kimball Hill in Putney. The reception will feature an opportunity to meet the artist, explore the exhibition, and enjoy light refreshments. RSVPs are encouraged at www.nextstagearts.org. Inspired by nature and guided by the materials themselves, Kolias creates rustic metal sculptures from abandoned objects gathered from antique shops, thrift stores, scrap yards, rural roadsides, woodland walks, and even the occasional kitchen drawer. Each piece begins with an idea but evolves organically as salvaged components suggest new possibilities. The resulting works celebrate creativity, sustainability, and the beauty of reinvention. Kolias generally leaves her finished sculptures unpainted, allowing the original character and weathered surfaces of the salvaged materials to remain visible.

“METALSUM” also introduces a newer dimension of Kolias’ practice: vibrant metal quilts crafted from vintage cookie tins. Drawing inspiration from traditional quilt patterns while embracing colorful reclaimed materials, these works expand her exploration of texture, pattern, color, and found-object artistry. “Metal quilting is a new endeavor for me,” Kolias explains. “I use traditional quilt patterns for design inspiration and colorful cookie tins as a base material. This invites me to bring the dynamics of color into my design work.” A lifelong artist, Kolias has worked across a remarkable range of creative disciplines, including theater, dance, costume design, textiles, landscape art, stonework, and hardscaping. Her artistic practice has encompassed community theater and cabaret, competitive ballroom dance, costume and wardrobe design, interior and textile arts, quilting, rug hooking, painting, needlepoint, and other crafts. She has also studied stonewall construction at The Stone Trust and developed her skills in hardscaping and rock-garden design. Her recent focus on metalwork – including jewelry making, metal fabrication, welding, and metal quilting – brings together decades of creative experience in a body of work that is playful, inventive, and deeply rooted in craftsmanship. Born in New Hampshire and now based in Putney, Kolias has maintained a lifelong connection to the arts as both an artist and teacher. The exhibition will be on view at NXT Gallery through Nov. 8. The gallery is open during Next Stage events and by appointment with the artist. To arrange a visit, contact Kolias at juliet_kilo@msn.com or 603-703-5699, or contact Next Stage Arts at info@nextstagearts.org or 802-387-0102.

Wildlife photographs at Gallery at the Vault

SPRINGFIELD, Vt. – Galley at the Vault is excited to present “An Illusion of Proximity,” a show by wildlife photographer Steve Costello, on display from Aug. 5 – Sept. 22. Costello credits his special interest in wildlife, especially his love for birds and animals, to three mentors. Growing up in Burlington, a childhood friend’s father introduced him to the outdoors and wildlife. Costello later attended St. Michael’s College, where photography professor Chazz Sutphen’s critiques and inspiration helped him fall in love with the camera.

After a 10-year journalism career, Costello met bird advocate Meeri Zetterstrom on his first day at work at Central Vermont Public Service (CVPS), the electric utility serving Milton, Vt., where she lived. Zetterstrom, a native of Finland, had seen a single osprey, a species that had been wiped out by DDT in the 1930s in Vermont. She wanted the state and CVPS, which owned the lake above which Zetterstrom lived, to help restore the elegant raptors to Vermont skies. Costello, about 30, and Zetterstrom, in her 70s, became fast friends, and a partnership was born.

Working with Zetterstrom, CVPS, later Green Mountain Power (GMP), and the Vermont Department of Fish & Wildlife, Costello helped make Zetterstrom’s dream come true. A pair of ospreys eventually produced a single chick on a platform just below Zetterstrom’s lakeside home, and thanks to Zetterstrom’s relentless efforts and support from CVPS and the state, the birds proliferated. Within a decade, dozens of ospreys were fledging in Vermont each year. In 2005, they were removed from the Vermont endangered species list. Throughout that effort, Costello learned at Zetterstrom’s hand how to photograph wildlife without affecting it, and how to use photography to move people to support wildlife conservation. Most of this collection was photographed from substantial distances with long telephoto lenses. After retirement from GMP four years ago, Costello returned to his roots, writing wildlife stories and shooting photos for the Rutland Herald and the Times Argus on a regular basis. “One of my primary objectives is to provide the viewer with a look at wildlife they might not normally be able to see themselves, to put them face to face with these beautiful and interesting species,” Costello said. “I aim to create portraits of the birds, animals, and even reptiles, and what I call the illusion of proximity.” Gallery at the Vault is located at 68 Main Street in Springfield, Vt. For more information, call 802-885-7111, email galleryvault@vermontel.net, or visit the gallery’s Facebook, Instagram, or website, www.galleryvault.org. Gallery at the Vault is accessible.

Cameo Baroque in Athens

ATHENS, Vt. – The Athens Brick Meetinghouse Committee, in conjunction with the Athens Historic Preservation Society, is honored to host Cameo Baroque at the 1817 Brick Meetinghouse in Athens, Vt., on Saturday, Aug. 29, at 4 p.m. Founded in 2014, Cameo Baroque – Leslie Stroud, traverso (Baroque flute); Beth Hilgartner, recorders and voice; Ernie Drown, harpsichord; and Laurie Rabut, viola da gamba – is Cameo Arts Foundation’s (CAF) in-house ensemble, and specializes in the music of the Baroque era performed on period instruments. Cameo Baroque is dedicated to bringing some lesser-known masterworks of the Baroque period to audiences. Most programs include at least one work that has been transcribed and/or arranged by Hilgartner from 17th- and 18th-century manuscripts available online from the International Music Score Library Project, www.imslp.org. Cameo Arts Foundation, Inc. (CAF) organizes and underwrites Cameo Baroque benefit concerts so that communities in the Vermont and New Hampshire region have access to high-quality, affordable live music, and organizations that work to meet basic human needs receive much-needed support. Admission at all CAF-sponsored concerts is by free-will offering, all of which goes to the Vermont Asylum Assistance Project, the designated charity for this concert. The Athens 1817 Meetinghouse is located at 2 Meetinghouse Road just off Route 35. For more information, contact Sherry Maher at 802-275-2835, or follow Athens Meetinghouse on Facebook.

BEST OF VERMONT SUMMER FESTIVAL RETURNS
SATURDAY, AUG. 22 & SUNDAY, AUG. 23
OKEMO FIELD, LUDLOW, VT

Festivalgoers enjoying blue skies.

Multiple food, drink, and vendor options available from which to purchase.

PHOTOS PROVIDED

LUDLOW, Vt. – The Okemo Valley Regional Chamber of Commerce (OVRCC) is pleased to announce the sixth annual Best of Vermont Summer Festival, set to take place on Saturday, Aug. 22, and Sunday, Aug. 23, at Okemo Field, located at the intersection of Route 103 and Bixby Road in Ludlow, Vt. Gates open both days from 11 a.m. – 5 p.m., rain or shine. Now firmly established as one of south-central Vermont’s most beloved signature events, the festival brings together the best of the Okemo Valley – its makers, its musicians, its flavors, and the warm, community-rooted spirit that defines Vermont summers at their finest. Attendees can expect a vibrant, two-day marketplace alive with music and showcasing New England makers and artisans celebrating the Vermont spirit, fine art, specialty foods, maple and cheese producers, and craft beverage makers. An expanded family fun zone offers clown performances, face painting, and hands-on activities for younger visitors, while food trucks and a dining tent featuring New England lobster rolls round out the culinary offerings, all set against the sweeping backdrop of the Green Mountains.

The festival is made possible in part through the generous support of presenting sponsor Mary W. Davis Realtor & Associates, whose continued commitment to the Okemo Valley community exemplifies the spirit of local partnership.

Live music lineup

Two full days of live entertainment, proudly sponsored by Inside Edge Rentals at Okemo, span folk, rock, Americana, and jam, closing Sunday afternoon with an interactive crowd-favorite: line dancing with BOLD (Britt & Olivia).

Saturday, Aug. 22

11 a.m. – 1 p.m.: Bear Mountain Boys
1-3 p.m.: The Loonz

3-5 p.m.: The Rustie Bus Band

Sunday, Aug. 23

11 a.m. – 1 p.m.: Sammy Blanchette
1-3 p.m.: Rick Redington & Tuff Luv
3-5 p.m.: Line dancing with BOLD (Britt & Olivia)

Participating vendors

Nearly 100 vendors will fill the festival grounds with a rich variety of goods from the Okemo Valley and across New England. Their products and crafts embody the best of Vermont and the region, including work from woodworkers, jewelers, fine artists, and photographers alongside specialty food producers, maple and cheese producers, and agricultural farms.

Craft beverage lovers will find a strong selection of local breweries, wineries, and distilleries, rounding out a marketplace that truly reflects the depth and diversity of the Okemo Valley’s creative and culinary community.

Thank you to our generous sponsors

The OVRCC extends its deepest gratitude to the following exceptional sponsors, whose generosity and community investment make the Best of Vermont Summer Festival possible:

Presenting Sponsor Mary W. Davis Realtor & Associates; Lead Sponsors Okemo Mountain Resort and Inside Edge Rentals at Okemo; Foundation Sponsors The Vermont Country Store, Beacon Bank, and The Bus – Marble Val-
