83-year-old man found after a night in the woods —

BY LISA STICKNEY

CAVENDISH, Vt. – Ron and Bonnie Emig picked up Pieter van Schaik in Windsor on Sunday morning, Oct. 4. They drove to Oscarson Road in Cavendish, where they met Kem and Svetlana Philips, at 9:30 a.m., to walk in Lord State Forest.

The group met to explore the possibility of connecting a trail from the state forest to a 125-acre parcel of land van Schaik donated to the Cavendish Community and Conservation Association two years ago for conservation, with the eventual goal of transferring the property to the State of Vermont.

They were looking for an old foundation that they had discovered on a previous walk. There is no record of anyone having a house there in the forest, so they were curious, and they wanted to explore it further.

After some time searching unsuccessfully, van Schaik said, "We changed direction and split in the hope of finding [the foundation]…We decided to split up – 25 feet apart." Van Schaik was at the end of the line that they formed.

Van Schaik said, "Once separated from the group, I realized I didn't have my cell phone. I could hear them calling out, but they could not hear me, because of my low voice. I have Parkinson's condition with low volume speech and I can't yell.

"I was slow, because I'm 83, and it all happened within a matter of minutes. I realized I was lost, and I should try to retrace my steps to the cars. I didn't realize it would be so difficult to retrace my footsteps. I couldn't recognize anything – there was so much heavy ground cover – ferns and leaves. I couldn't tell where they had been or see footsteps."

"I continued walking in what I thought was the direction of the cars," he continued, "but I got lost."

"I gave up walking around what I thought was 5 p.m.," van Schaik said. It was getting dark, and so he lay down in the woods. "The canopy was very dense, and I could see very few stars – I decided not to continue walking in case I hurt myself and rested for the night." He continued, "It's not a smooth surface, and around what I think was 7 a.m. the next morning, I got up and was determined to find a road.

"Within an hour I came upon a house. I walked down the driveway and onto Knapp Pond Road." Van Schaik explained that he didn't know where he was at the time, but started walking towards Tarbell Hill and eventually recognized where he was. "I was on Knapp Pond Road when Peter Kolenda found me. He was driving up Knapp Pond Road, and he picked me up."

Kolenda, retired Ludlow fire chief, explained that he was aware of the search. Kolenda said as he "came by fire station in Cavendish I saw that there were about 100 people lining up to search."

Kolenda explained that he saw that there were plenty of people ready to search for van Schaik, so he drove on. "I was heading up to camp and the fire department was behind me," Kolenda said. "I continued up to Knapp Pond and saw someone walking on the road with a cane, and I saw it was Pieter."

He stopped and offered van Schaik a ride. Kolenda said van Schaik said he recognized him as a familiar person, but didn't recall his name, and he added that van Schaik said, "I don't want to spend another night in the woods." Kolenda reported, "His spirits were good."

"I talked to him and he was coherent, probably a little cold, but otherwise he looked good," Kolenda said. "I brought him to Oscarson Road, where Proctorsville Fire was set up to go into the woods to start searching." Kolenda explained they checked his vital signs, and added, "He stayed in my truck until the ambulance came, and they transported him to Springfield Hospital."

Kolenda continued, "Somebody would've found him – I'm just glad I was able to see him. It worked out well."

Van Schaik concluded, "I'm grateful for the response of the community and getting together to search for me."

Londonderry open meeting allegation, to reconvene dam committee

BY SHAWNTAE WEBB

LONDONDERRY, Vt. – Londonderry Selectboard Chair Tom Cavanagh announced at the Oct. 5 meeting that the town received a complaint on Sept. 22 "alleging a violation of the open meeting law at the Sept. 21 meeting." Cavanagh continued that the context of the allegation stated, "The selectboard went outside of the basis identified for entering an executive session by debating, negotiating, and reaching a consensus to alter the town's budget structure to bypass the explicit will of the voters."

Cavanagh said that the town's attorney, Robert Fisher, provided his legal opinion on the matter. According to Fisher, the board entered executive session at the Sept. 21 meeting to discuss and hold a six-month review for the part-time town clerk, which is a valid reason to enter executive session.

In executive session, the board promoted Assistant Town Clerk George Mora from part time to full time, and "the decision resulted in no increase to the town budget." Cavanagh asserted that, since there was no alteration to the town budget, there was no violation of the open meeting law as alleged.

Cavanagh said it was also alleged that the promotion was improper because the town had already voted against the appropriation of funds for this position at the annual Town Meeting in March, and at a special meeting on May 11. Cavanagh stated, referencing Fisher's legal opinion, that the selectboard has the general supervision of the affairs of the town, including the general fund budget that was approved by voters, and concluded that the board acted within its authority.

Resident Chad Stoddard, who submitted the violation complaint, then spoke to the board, stating that the town voted to indefinitely postpone allocating taxpayer funds to extend the town clerk's operational hours and payroll compensation. "It legally bars town officials from taking executive action to resurrect it."

Cavanagh clarified that, per Fisher's advice, the vote for additional funding for a full-time general office manager position did not prohibit the selectboard from promoting the assistant town clerk to full time, to be paid from the approved general fund budget.

The full-time salary adjustment line in the budget, for $20,000, was allocated from the general budget as follows: $1,000 from emergency management, $1,500 from computer equipment, $1,500 from town office fuel since the new HVAC system was installed, $1,500 from town office locks and security, and $750 from town hall locks and security, since the town now has security cameras. Cavanagh also specified that Mora opted out of health insurance, which is a savings for the town.

Stoddard felt this was a misuse of specified funds, to which Cavanagh replied that line items within the general budget can be moved around by the selectboard as they see necessary.

Board member Taylor Prouty further clarified that the need for more staff has been an ongoing conversation among the board and the town office. "I was made aware of the need in the town clerk's office," Prouty stated.

Selectboard Vice Chair James Ameden questioned Town Administrator Aileen Tulloch, asking if the budget allocation portion can legally be discussed in executive session. Tulloch answered that,

Ludlow partially outsources dispatch services

BY NICK GIBERTI

LUDLOW, Vt. – The Ludlow Police Department and Ludlow Fire Rescue have recently, to varying degrees, outsourced their dispatch services to Springfield and Keene, respectively, due to an ongoing shortage of dispatchers for Ludlow's local dispatch department. According to Town Manager Penny Wu, the dispatch department would normally employ four full-time and one or two part-time dispatchers for normal, 24/7 operations. However, currently, the department employs only two full-time dispatchers, and finding personnel to fill the open positions has proven challenging, according to Wu.

The Ludlow Police Department's dispatch services will be handled by Springfield's dispatch department from 7 p.m. – 7 a.m. nightly, while Ludlow Fire Rescue's dispatch will be provided entirely by Keene Mutual Aid in Keene, N.H.

Dispatcher Staci Bishop explained to the board at its Sept. 21 meeting that morale among Ludlow's dispatchers has been low for nearly all of 2026 due to a perception among department personnel that the continued existence of the department is in question, and that the difficulty in recruitment and retention is exacerbated by a lack of assurance that dispatchers' jobs will exist past June of 2027. When board Vice Chair Justin Hyjek stated that the dispatch department was funded through fiscal year 2027, Bishop claimed that this was the first time she or any of the dispatchers had been told of this fact.

Additionally, Bishop claimed, "It's been the push from [Fire Chief Ben Whalen] since he started to get rid of" the dispatch department, alleging that communication and emails from dispatchers to the fire department have frequently gone unanswered.

When Hyjek thanked Bishop for her "candor," a testy exchange followed in which Bishop accused the board of holding executive sessions during which it discussed disbanding the dispatch department. Hyjek denied the accusations and admonished Bishop for speaking about discussions for which she was not present, adding, "We've had two resignations, we've had two notices given, we've had to discuss other personnel matters, so you can infer what those meetings were."

At its next meeting on Oct. 5, the board approved allowing the outsourcing of dispatch services to Springfield and Keene, with Wu telling the board that she would like to reevaluate the arrangement on a quarterly basis. Due to the agreements with Springfield and Keene, Ludlow will continue to have dispatch services for its police, fire, and ambulance departments on a round-the-clock basis.

Also on Oct. 5, the board approved the request of the Side Hill Cronchers Snowmobile Club to utilize certain portions of public roads in town as part of its trail network. While the board approves a nearly identical list each year, in 2025, a landowner withdrew permission from the club for use of her land, leading the club to request use of a portion of

Discover your magic at The Vermont Moon Crystal

BY PAULA BENSON

LONDONDERRY, Vt. – Carole Moody-Reed grew up in East Longmeadow, Mass., where she would disappear into the quarries that her great-grandfather owned for hours, making her mother sick with worry that she had perhaps drowned.

Reed's great-grandfather was one of the first settlers of East Longmeadow and owned acres of farmland and several quarries. As kids, Reed and her brother would explore the quarries; her brother would fish, and Reed would wander off to find interesting rocks and stones. Other times, she visited by herself, sometimes even in the dark.

"Ever since I was little, I've always loved rocks and minerals, just nature, period," Reed recounted, adding, "I have always had a thing for the moon."

Now living in Vermont with her husband, Matthew, Reed is the owner of a new shop at 2046 North Main Street in Londonderry: The Vermont Moon Crystal. Specializing in healing crystals, tarot cards, herbs, and metaphysical supplies, the store allows Reed to combine her interest and experience in metaphysical studies with her passion for helping people through their own journeys into that realm.

Reed previously owned stores in Connecticut and Massachusetts, and her goal has always been to guide customers to whatever it is they are searching for. Reed feels strongly that, no matter what anyone is going through, they are in a better place by the time they leave her shop.

Over the years, Reed said, she has met "a lot of customers who came in looking for something, who were upset and maybe going through [a difficult time]. I still think about those people," she admitted.

Reed's mission at The Vermont Moon Cystal is to create a space where everyone can feel calm and untroubled. "Regardless of whether you are spiritual or not, whatever your thoughts are," Reed said, "I want people to come in here and feel welcome."

Eventually, Reed plans to build out the upstairs space to hold tarot and palm readings, workshops, and community gatherings. A more distant future plan involves something even bigger. "My dream is to have a retreat [property]," Reed confessed. "I want a house, and [either] since it was part of a salary discussion, it could. Ameden did not agree, and felt that the budget portion should have been in open meeting.

The room questioned why there was such an increase in need for help. It was reported that the biggest task that needs to be completed, by state statute, is the digitization of all public records, including land maps, surveys, birth and death records, and marriage licenses. These paper records date back to the 1700s, when Londonderry was founded, and digitization could take years to complete.

Town Clerk Allison Marino further stated that part of the statute requires the town to keep these documents forever, and that some of the ink on the older documents is fading, so they need to be digitized before the town loses them.

Some of these tasks were neglected over time, or were started but not completed at the rate they needed to be. Prouty noted that some of the work predates everyone on the board today.

"The work George is doing is hugely beneficial, because of her skills," expressed Prouty. He felt it made more sense "to work with a professional that can help us make up some of that lost ground."

Mora, who was in attendance, invited anyone interested in taking a tour of the vault, or visiting the town office, to see what needs to be done and how much the employees do day to day.

Ameden then continued the conversation from the previous meeting to reconvene the Williams Dam Advisory Committee. Prouty and Leanne Alexander agreed, adding that it seemed as though the town has enough information about removing the dam, but not enough understanding on what it will take in terms of the scope of work and funds needed to repair the dam.

Cavanagh voiced that the board had previously discussed holding a bond vote at Town Meeting, but if it reconvenes the committee, it would not have time to present the bond vote, and it would "kick the can down the road for another year."

Ameden countered, expressing that he felt getting the information out is more important at this point, so everyone can make an educated decision on what they want to do.

Earlier in the meeting, the opportunity to work with Ron Rhodes on the grant with Weston was brought back to light by a resident in attendance. Considering the town could apply for the grant for engineering designs for the removal of the dam, and it would not be obligated to move forward with it, he felt the town had nothing to lose. Cavanagh concurred, and confirmed that the town has until March to make a decision on the grant opportunity.

A majority of those in attendance agreed that they needed a breakdown of each option, including the costs for each option, in order to move forward with a decision for the dam.

Prouty recommended keeping the topic on the agenda, and suggested that having a contractor develop the scope of work may be the most accurate first step to take. He also expressed that the committee would be helpful in compiling the information, searching for new available grants, and reaching out to the selectboard for assistance in tasks it feels it cannot handle alone. The committee could make a presentation to the town based on new information it compiles, including potential unintended consequences, such as how the cost of homeowners flood insurance could increase if the dam is removed.

Ameden voiced that anyone on the previous committee that wanted to be on the new, or reconvened, committee would be welcome. Prouty iterated that the board would not want the committee to redo any work that has already been done, but to build on its previous findings to update the townspeople.

"I think this is the right step," said resident and previous dam committee member Rachel Febbie. "To get everybody the information so they can make the decision that is right for them...I thank you for that."

In other news, it was announced that the bulletin board is up at the South Londonderry Library, and the board approved it as its third physical location for posting official notices, while also removing the South Londonderry Post Office from the official physical locations.

Sections of Main Street and Middletown Road will see closures on Oct. 31, from 4:30-7 p.m., for the annual trunk-or-treat. West River Road will be closed on Nov. 1, from 10:30 a.m. – 1 p.m., for a Running of the Dead 5K event.

The Londonderry Selectboard meets on the first and third Mondays of each month, at 6 p.m., at the town office and on Zoom.

Ludlow Village Vision Plan

LUDLOW, Vt. – What should the future of Ludlow Village look like?

The Town of Ludlow is inviting residents, business owners, property owners, and visitors to help answer that question at a community open house on Friday, Oct. 16, from 4-6 p.m., at Ludlow Town Hall, 37 South Depot Street.

The Village Vision Plan is a master plan for Ludlow Village focused on transportation, housing, economic opportunities, and the overall vitality of the village. Project consultants have prepared draft recommendations, and the town is seeking community input before the plan is finalized.

"This plan is about the future of our village, so it's important that it reflects the priorities of the people who live, work, own businesses, and spend time here," said Erin Ladd, Ludlow's director of planning and zoning. "Whether you can spare 10 minutes or stay for the whole evening, your feedback will make a real difference."

Attendees can drop in anytime during the two-hour open house. Most people will need just 10 to 20 minutes to review the recommendations, answer interactive questions, and talk with members of the project team. From 5-5:30 p.m., the team will give a formal presentation on the proposed recommendations. Light refreshments will be provided.

The Village Vision Plan is funded through a Better Connections grant, a partnership between the Vermont Agency of Transportation, Vermont Agency of Commerce and Community Development, and Vermont Agency of Natural Resources. The program supports community planning that brings together transportation, land use, economic vitality, and resilience to strengthen Vermont's downtowns and village centers.

Anyone who cannot attend in person can join the 5 p.m. presentation via Zoom by emailing ELadd@ludlow.vt.us for the link.

Project information, updates, and ways to participate are available through the Ludlow Village Vision Plan StoryMap, which is available on the Ludlow Planning & Zoning homepage.

For more information, contact Ladd at 802-228-4870 or ELadd@ludlow.vt.us.

Proposal 3 information session in Chester

CHESTER, Vt. – The Right for Vermont Foundation will hold a free public information session concerning Proposal 3, which would add a collective bargaining provision to Vermont's Constitution, on Tuesday, Oct. 20, from 6-7:30 p.m., at the Fullerton Inn and Restaurant in Chester. The sessions will be hosted by Clara Morrison, executive director of the Right for Vermont Foundation, and Alison Despathy, a member of the foundation's advisory board.

All sessions are free and open to the public. Each session will include a presentation followed by time for questions.

Godfrey Road. According to a presentation given by Assistant Trail Master Kevin Berge, without use of the requested portion of Godfrey Road, the statewide trail network would become noncontiguous, which Berge intimated would result in lost revenue for Ludlow and the surrounding area due to snowmobilers losing access or finding other, unrestricted areas in which to ride. Berge also said the club would place additional signage notifying riders of the speed limit and the fact that the affected portion of Godfrey Road is a "sensitive area."

Resident Peter Jenkins rose to oppose the approval, telling the board his house is "20 feet from snowmobiles racing by at all hours of the day and night, not obeying the speed limit." Jenkins also reminded club President John Murphy that he was told before last year's season that use of Godfrey Road would be temporary, and that the club would investigate alternate ways to keep the trails connected. Murphy detailed some of the things he has attempted, but admitted he has ultimately been unsuccessful in rectifying the situation. "We don't love riding on the roads," Murphy said, but due to the circumstances and what they are, we need to use Godfrey Road to keep our trail intact."

Jenkins implored the selectboard to visit Godfrey Road and inspect the damage he believes is caused by snowmobiles prior to approving use of the road, as did resident Kevin Kuntz, who said he allows the club to utilize a portion of his land, but sympathizes with Jenkins, and feels that snowmobilers create additional hazards on the road.

Ultimately, the board approved the club's full list of requested roads, including the disputed portion of Godfrey Road.

The Ludlow Selectboard meets on the first Monday of each month, at 6 p.m., in the Ludlow Town Hall auditorium.

cabins, or a motel, with acreage. I want a garden area where people can sit around a fire pit. I want a place where people can go out, look out at the mountains, and do yoga. I just want a nice, calm, peaceful place for everybody."

There, Reed would host groups for larger workshop events such as herb classes, meditation, sound baths, moon circles, and classes to make bracelets, necklaces, or to create intention bottles. Reed has many unique, fun, and creative ideas swirling around in her head beneath long, silver locks. She had to laugh at herself as she revealed her impatience at the pace at which these things come together.

Reed said customers and neighbors that have come into the shop since she opened in August have all been kind and welcoming. Many visitors passing through town stopped in impromptu after spotting the sign with its peaceful half-moon logo advertising "Crystals – Jewelry – Wellness – Gifts."

"I love when people just come in and wander around," Reed remarked. "Even if it's not their cup of tea, maybe they will tell a friend."

As an admitted empath, Reed said she can feel someone's energy when they walk through the door, and that can be exhausting by day's end. "I have people come in and they don't know why," said Reed. "Others come in and say, 'I want to find love.'"

Reed instructs them to go to the stones, close their eyes, and think about what they want to attract into their lives. Once they find their intention, she asks that they open their eyes, go to the stone that the eye is drawn to, and "let it know what they are looking for."

The Vermont Moon Crystal is open Tuesday through Saturday, from 10 a.m. – 6 p.m., and Sunday, from 11 a.m. – 6 p.m. You can visit them online at www.thevermontmooncrystal.com.

HCRS new mental health urgent care center

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. – Health Care & Rehabilitation Services (HCRS) has been approved for $3.6 million in grant funding from the Vermont Department of Mental Health to develop a new mental health urgent care center in Brattleboro, creating a community-based option for adults and youth experiencing mental health, substance use, and co-occurring crises.

HCRS plans to begin offering 24/7 walk-in mental health urgent care services in January 2027, with additional components coming online as implementation progresses. The project will also expand residential stabilization capacity for children and youth, with four short-term residential beds planned as part of the initiative.

The new center will address a critical gap in southeastern Vermont's crisis continuum: a therapeutic place for people to go when they need more support than can be provided through Mobile Crisis, but emergency department or inpatient care may not be necessary.

"For years, we have worked to ensure that people experiencing a mental health or substance-use crisis have a place to call and someone who can respond. This new funding allows us to build the next critical piece: a safe, therapeutic place to go when someone needs more support," said HCRS CEO Anne Bilodeau.

The mental health urgent care center will provide adults and youth with peer support, crisis intervention and stabilization, medical support, care coordination, assessment, and connection to ongoing services. The center will also support individuals experiencing co-occurring mental health and substance use conditions. The center is specifically designed for mental health and substance use crisis care and is not intended to replace emergency medical care for physical health emergencies.

Four short-term crisis stabilization beds will be dedicated to children and youth who need a safe, therapeutic level of support but do not require inpatient psychiatric hospitalization.

The center will operate in close coordination with 988, HCRS' Mobile Crisis services, local hospitals, outpatient providers, schools, peer support organizations, first responders, housing providers, and other community partners. HCRS will work with regional partners to establish referral pathways, warm handoffs, and coordinated follow-up to help individuals move more seamlessly between levels of care.

The initiative responds to needs identified through HCRS' Community Needs Assessment and regional crisis data, including high emergency-department utilization, barriers to timely crisis stabilization, and the need for additional community-based alternatives. Southeastern Vermont has experienced particularly high emergency department utilization associated with mental health crises, underscoring the need for another option for individuals who require immediate support but not hospital-level care.

HCRS is currently working to finalize leased space in Brattleboro for the Center. Over the coming months, HCRS will prepare the facility, recruit and train staff, develop operational workflows, and continue coordinating with community partners in preparation for the January launch. The new center is expected to create approximately 34 positions. Visit the www.hcrs.org career page for more information.

Additional information about the center, including its location, access, available services, and referral processes, will be shared as implementation progresses.

Disability Awareness and De-escalation Training

LONDONDERRY, Vt. – Neighborhood Connections is pleased to announce an important event in its Soup and Sandwich Series. On Thursday, Oct. 20, from 11:30 a.m. – 1 p.m., Dr. Kendra LaRoche, executive director of the Special Needs Support Center (SNSC), will be the guest speaker at Neighborhood Connections, 5700 Vermont Route 100. She is the creator of the Disability Awareness and De-escalation Training program. She is offering continuing education credit for all attendees who may benefit from it. We welcome all emergency responders, but all are welcome.

Emergency responders are often the first to assist individuals with disabilities in times of stress or crisis. The Disability Awareness and De-escalation Training helps police, fire, and EMT personnel build awareness, empathy, and skills needed to respond safely and effectively. The program will also be very helpful for private citizens who are working with emotionally challenged individuals.

The course links evidence-based de-escalation strategies with an understanding of how the brain processes emotion and stress. Through interactive instruction and real-world scenarios, participants learn techniques for emotional regulation, validation, and active listening, while gaining practical insight into mental health; and intellectual, developmental, and learning disabilities. The training also introduces SNIP communication tools that support clear, respectful, and person-centered interactions.

Upon completion, participants will be able to identify visible and invisible disabilities and understand how they affect behavior and communication; apply de-escalation strategies using validation, empathy, and active listening; recognize the neurological connection between emotion, stress, and behavior; use communication boards and SNIP identification tools to improve safety and understanding during emergency encounters; and reflect on past experiences to strengthen professional judgment in future situations.

For more information or to RSVP, please call Neighborhood Connections at 802-824-4343 to reserve a spot. For questions about the program, contact Suzanne Burge at 802-824-4343 or Suzanne@ncvermont.org.

Release and realign this fall with gentle yoga

SPRINGFIELD, Vt. – Join Springfield yoga teacher Jo Bregnard in person or online from the Springfield Unitarian Universalist Meetinghouse, 21 Fairground Road in Springfield, Vt., for a gentle, accessible practice inspired by the wisdom of fall in Chinese energetics.

Release & Realign classes meet on Fridays, Oct. 23-Dec. 18, from 10-11 a.m., (no class Nov. 27) for eight weeks. All are welcome, no yoga experience is necessary.

"First, we'll discharge the excess energy that leaves us jumping from one thing to another and unable to focus," Bregnard said, describing her classes. "We'll tune in to our breath, then we'll move through some shapes designed to settle the jitters and slow the mind-roll so we can reconnect with the rhythm of the natural world around us. Autumn trees teach us to let go, so we'll explore discerning what to release – like doom scrolling – and what to keep as we head toward winter."

Most of the practice will be on the floor – or in a chair, if that's preferred – where attendees can discover the stillness of yin yoga and the support of props for restorative postures, balancing out dynamic "yang" daily activities. In the meantime, Bregnard will offer tips for settling, techniques for nervous system soothing, and tools for improving mobility.

"We want to be able to focus when it's work time, rest when needed, and play like a kid afterwards," she said.

Come to the Unitarian Universalist Meetinghouse to attend classes in person, or tune in live online via Zoom. All registrants get access to recordings to access on their own schedules. Pay upfront or with a payment plan, pay-what-you-wish, or drop in to individual sessions. For complete details and to register, visit studio.jobregnard.com/product/96156.

As an added bonus, those who register for the full series and attend in person will receive a set of props to keep: a mat, a pair of blocks, a strap, an eye pillow, a yoga wedge, and a neck pillow, while supplies last.

For more information, email jo@jobregnard.com.

welcomes Vinnie Stoodley and Connie Taylor to the Springfield Team!

Vinnie Stoodley | I was born and raised right in the Springfield area, only leaving to go to Albany for the six-year pharmacy program. Now, I'm building my own family in the same community with my wife, Brittany, and son, Cole. I'm an avid hunter and fisher when it's in season and love skateboarding all year round.
I always had a strong aptitude for math and anatomy, so pharmacy felt like a great intersection of my skills, along with the high impact it can have on the community. I also really value the team approach and supportive culture.

Connie Taylor | I live in Vermont with my Army veteran husband and our four fur-babies. I have a close-knit family, with most of my immediate family in upstate New York or New England. I enjoy spending time with family and friends, cooking, reading, puzzles, listening to the Grateful Dead, traveling, and spending time outdoors with my dog.
I decided to become a pharmacist because I wanted to work in healthcare. I was always good at math and science in school, and I'm a people-person. Community pharmacists are some of the most accessible and approachable healthcare providers, with a connection to their local communities and the opportunity to help people manage their healthcare.

Dartmouth Health Children's joins Golisano Children's Alliance

LEBANON, N.H. – Dartmouth Health Children's, the region's most comprehensive pediatric health system, has received a philanthropic investment of $30 million from entrepreneur and visionary child-health leader Tom Golisano. In recognition of this gift, Children's Hospital at Dartmouth Hitchcock Medical Center, the only children's hospital in New Hampshire, will be renamed to Golisano Children's Hospital at Dartmouth Health in perpetuity. This is the largest philanthropic gift Dartmouth Health has ever received and will be a catalyst for growing capabilities by enhancing the workforce and accelerating priority projects to modernize critical spaces at the children's hospital, and to expand services at Dartmouth Health Children's clinics in southern New Hampshire.

"It is with great pride that I provide this important investment to the Children's Hospital at Dartmouth Hitchcock Medical Center, marking its transition to a Golisano Children's Hospital and welcoming them into the Golisano Children's Alliance," said Golisano. "This investment is intended to elevate pediatric care by advancing services and building a new, modern intensive care nursery and pediatric intensive care unit to address the needs of the sickest babies and children and their families. With this shared vision, the hospital will strengthen its position in pediatric medicine, providing life-changing care of the highest quality with dignity to children and their families."

In 2025, Golisano launched the Golisano Children's Alliance, a national initiative that provides strategic funding and brings together children's hospitals across the United States to elevate pediatric care by expanding services, strengthening collaboration, and ensuring that children and families have access to the highest quality medical attention close to home.

This investment will drive a leading-edge, complete renovation of the critical care units at the children's hospital in Lebanon, N.H. It will support the construction of newly designed and fully equipped state-of-the-art individual patient and family rooms in the intensive care nursery, while a transformation and expansion of the hospital's pediatric critical care unit will create a more functional space for the region's most acutely ill and injured pediatric patients, bringing the top-tier standards of the highest specialty care to more children and families than ever before in the hospital's history.

"I have profound gratitude to Tom Golisano for his generous investment in children and families across our region," said Keith J. Loud, physician-in-chief of Dartmouth Health Children's. "We are honored to join the Golisano Children's Alliance and excited to collaborate with such a select group of leading children's hospitals to share knowledge that allows all of us to deliver the best care, where it matters most – close to home."

"This gift will accelerate the growth of pediatric healthcare in the ways our communities need it most: reimagined neonatal and critical care facilities, an expansion of pediatric specialty services closer to home, and new ways to connect our rural health system to a national network of excellence," said Dr. Joanne M. Conroy, CEO and president of Dartmouth Health. "At its core, it ensures we will always meet families where they are, in their most difficult moments, with both expertise and compassion. We are honored to carry the Golisano name forward in service of our shared mission."

This announcement is part of a recent $225 million investment by Golisano, which includes five other children's hospitals joining the alliance: Children's Minnesota, Johns Hopkins All Children's, Renown Health, Children's Hospital Colorado, and Vanderbilt Health's Monroe Carell Jr. Children's Hospital. The addition of these hospitals brings the total number of Golisano Children's Alliance hospitals to 21 across the U.S., past the halfway mark toward Golisano's goal of 40.

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. – Tina Phyllis Weinberg Rosen passed peacefully on Oct. 4, 2026, at the age of 77. Born on Valentine's Day, 1949, in Bronx, N.Y., Tina was a print and runway model, fashionista, entrepreneur, dog lover, and proud mother and grandmother. While Tina would joke, "You can take the girl out of the Bronx…," she made Ludlow, Vt., her home for 30 years, including as a ski instructor at Okemo Mountain, and her beloved clothing boutique, Tina's Fun Stuff to Wear.

She is survived by her husband and retired physician, Jeff; her older son and tech executive, Josh, and his wife, Erin Morgan; her younger son, entertainment attorney and film producer Jeremy, who still calls Ludlow home; and her granddaughter, Hazel Mae. Tina will be buried at Riverside Cemetery in Woodstock, Vt. We will forever hold our Valentine Girl in our hearts.

Dear Editor,

On behalf of Black River Good Neighbor Services (BRGNS), we extend a sincere thank-you to all for supporting another Gigantic Fall Rummage Sale at Fletcher Farm. An outstanding success! Truly, we are most grateful to our community that enables us to continue providing assistance to those in need.

Starting weeks in advance, so many volunteers worked tirelessly setting up this annual fundraiser. Their dedication and commitment genuinely support the organization's core values. Simply put, this sale, a huge undertaking, could not happen without devoted volunteer efforts. And, we certainly do have that! Thank you very much, each and every one of you.

Among the many dedicated volunteers who worked at this event are the board of directors, also working behind the scenes to keep things looking good for shoppers. And, speaking of shoppers, we really want to thank everyone who attended and shopped the sale, making it so very successful.

Please know that your dollars go directly to support our programs that include a food shelf, clothing, community meals, and financial and disaster assistance to those in need, serving the towns of Ludlow, Mount Holly, Belmont, Cavendish, Proctorsville, and Plymouth. We are here to help.

For more information about Black River Good Neighbor Services, please visit our website, www.brgn.org, call us at 802-228-3663, or visit us at 37B Main Street, Ludlow.

To the Editor,

I write in strong support of Tom Charlton for reelection as Vermont House representative for Chester, Grafton, Athens, and Windham.

Affordability of life in Vermont is a big issue in this November election. Rep. Charlton's position on affordability is best expressed in his own words: "If you are concerned as to whether you can afford to stay in your home or stay in Vermont, and whether your kids can afford to stay in Vermont and build a career here, you need to vote wisely. And I think that rather than hand an opportunity again to the party which has caused these problems and has had the upper hand for 26 of the last 30 years, and has not fixed the problem, I don't think you should vote Democrat if you are concerned about affordability."

Go to Tom's Facebook page, "Tom Charlton for Vermont House of Representatives," to see Tom's full statement, "Can you afford Vermont?"

Indeed, can you or I, can we afford Vermont?

Respectfully,
Anna Vesely Pilette

Dear Editor,

Kendra Rickerby (Letters, Sept. 30) mistakes my argument about the value of AI in the schools as an ad hominem attack. An argument based on untruths is deceptive, whether or not the presenter is aware of its falsity. I apologize if my wording induced Ms. Rickerby to think that I was accusing her of being the deceiver. Only she knows whether she advanced her argument by accepting Silicon Valley's version of the state of AI or by having fully investigated it herself. If the former is the case, then she has indeed succumbed to a Wall Street strategy (AI's impending bubble collapse will be a repeat of the subprime bubble crash). If the latter is the case, then she has a responsibility to reevaluate her recommendation in the light of her experience as a school administrator.

Administrators, unfortunately, are forced to focus on numbers, not on education, and AI, like standardized testing, is one of those horrid things they have to make peace with. Neither Act 46 nor Act 73 address the heart of good education, and until the Legislature decides to do that, she and her colleagues will be like mice in a maze, constrained by walls they are not allowed to see beyond.

Sincerely,
Chuck Gregory

Dear Friends,

I am David Trumble, Democratic candidate for New Hampshire State Senate in District 8. District 8 is made up of 20 towns in four counties, from Charlestown and Claremont all the way to Weare.

My wife, Linda, a special education teacher, and I have been married for 30 years and have two grown children, who both attended our public schools. We built our home and farm in Weare, a good place to raise a family and run a small business. I have been an organic farmer for 40 years. I am running for office to help our towns be a great place to live and raise a family for young people today.

Our rural towns need a strong voice for our public schools and our natural environment. I ran for this seat in 2024 and have been active throughout the district. I have been a strong voice at the State House in Concord, testifying over 100 times on legislation to benefit our region and the people of the state.

Here are my top three priorities for common sense solutions.

First, the state should live up to its constitutional duty to provide adequate funding to the public schools. Every child in New Hampshire deserves a good education. Ninety percent of our children attend a public school. They represent the future of our economy and our democracy.

New Hampshire is last in the country in terms of the state's share of funding for public schools. The state provides only 25% of expenses, while the national average is around 50%. For special education, the State of New Hampshire only funds 11%. No other state leaves the cost of paying for the public schools almost entirely to the towns.

The local property tax system is near the breaking point, causing stress for homeowners and renters alike. Seniors are being forced out of their homes. Homelessness in New Hampshire has risen fourfold in the last seven years. More state funding for public schools would provide property tax relief and allow towns to adequately fund their fire departments, roads, and libraries.

Republicans have been in charge for the past 10 years and start each session with a tax cut for the wealthy and large corporations. They expanded the voucher program to provide subsidies to the wealthiest families in the state. Combined, these steps cost the state over $400 million a year in revenue that could go to support all our people.

Second, we need to make New Hampshire a place where young people can afford to settle down. This means being able to own a home, raise a family, and have access to affordable childcare and healthcare, including mental health care.

The state needs to be an active partner in addressing these issues. Instead, the Republicans have defunded the Housing Champions program, which helps towns that want more affordable housing. They defunded the state's major childcare workforce program, refusing to pay early education workers a living wage. They defunded the arts. They have made it harder for people who need food assistance and medical care to get help.

Third, we need to restore civility and treat everyone with respect. There is no room for policies that drive people apart. We are our best when all members of the community are welcome.

We have run a grassroots campaign with hundreds of people volunteering their time or making contributions. You can learn more at www.trumble4nh.com, and on Facebook and Instagram.

When it comes to ballot question No. 2, I urge you to vote "no." It does not solve the chronic underfunding of public schools by the state, and it will force our local schools to cut essential education programs like art, music, career and technical education, AP classes, extra reading instruction, and after-school activities.

I would be honored to have your vote on Nov. 3. Also, I would ask you to please vote for my fellow Democratic candidates. Together, we will work hard for you. Thank you!

Sincerely,
David Trumble

Dear Editor,

I'd like to thank Cavendish, Proctorsville, and local fire departments for all their efforts organizing search parties for me on Oct. 4 and 5, when hiking Lord's State Forest. I lost my way, but spent the evening enjoying moonlight in Vermont. I especially appreciate the efforts of all those individuals in the search parties organized by the fire department, state police, and the Windsor County Sheriff's Department who extended use of their drone and infrared technology to help me. Finally, I got back to where I entered Lord's State Forest and connected with Peter Kolenda.

With Gratitude,
Pieter van Schaik

To the Editor,

Vermont's constitution turns 250 next July. The rights it declares are old; the pressure on them is new.

Vermonters have taken to their village greens in numbers not seen in years. They are finding permits, fees, and insurance requirements waiting for them, and more being written. At least one town in every county in Vermont has an ordinance or policy on the books regulating assembly or speech. And in July 2025, the Vermont League of Cities and Towns advised every city and town in Vermont to adopt a policy on protests. Both halves of that story are close to home. Ludlow's ordinance on unlawful assemblies, already on the books, is arguably in direct conflict with a First Amendment decision of the United States Supreme Court. In Chester, where I own a home, a first draft of a rule for the town Green reached the selectboard for its Oct. 7 meeting.

Vermont's constitution is older than the First Amendment and differently made. It does not say what government may not abridge; it says what the people have. It declares that "the people have a right to assemble together," and it commands that the rights it declares "ought not to be violated on any pretence [sic] whatsoever." It carries a history almost no one remembers: In 1786, asked to confine assembly to gatherings held "in a legal way," a Vermont convention refused. The Vermont Supreme Court has never said how far that promise reaches.

I am a retired lawyer, and I have taken up that question in an article, "The People Have a Right," which makes the case that the promise reaches the village green, and reaches further than the First Amendment does. It can be read or downloaded without charge at www.ssrn.com/abstract=7524318. Until the Court speaks, the towns writing the rules and the neighbors gathering on the greens are both working without Vermont's answer.

Before Vermont celebrates its constitution, Vermonters – and their selectboards – should hear what it says.

Sincerely,
Don Clark
Chester, Vt.

Join the gallery on Oct. 16, from 5-7 p.m., for Bellows Falls Third Friday and an opening reception for the artists featuring live jazz by Ashok & Co. All gallery events are free and open to the public; for wheelchair accessibility, call 802-289-0104.

The "Aspen & Sequoia" duo show, by artists Aspen Lapham Fersch and Sequoia Isis Mayer, both based in Rochester, Vt., presents a mixed-media collaboration including portraits of impactful family members and friends, and found objects of deep personal importance. These two series, titled "Mod(ern) Portraits" and "In a Jar" are inspired by both artists' love for the natural world as expressed by observing and immersing themselves in nature, along with travel, encouraging kindness, and the process of learning new things. "In a Jar" is influenced by the book of the same title by Deborah Marcero.

Sherman, based in Stoddard, N.H., has developed a series of paintings titled "Grotoons" inspired by art historical "grotesques," especially figures which appeal to a certain bizarreness, invoke emotions of sympathetic pity, and combine with humor. Examples in painting of such creatures, often mixed between animals and humans, are seen in the margins of illuminated manuscripts, where they are known as a "drollery." Sherman's "Grotoons" paintings are being offered as hand-touched and varnished archival pigment prints on canvas, mounted, matted, and framed by the artist.

The "Form and Function" group show is inspired by the success of the gallery's Form and Function Shop, and the gallery is pleased to welcome new artwork to Bellows Falls by Chris Archer, Whitney Barrett, Robert Burch, Robert DuGrenier, Terresa Flowers, Judi Forman, Corinne Greenhalgh, Nicholas Kekic, Mark Ragonesse, Susi Ryan, Andy Snyder, Sarah Sweeney, and Almut Yakovleff.

Canal Street Art Gallery is located at 23 Canal Street in historic downtown Bellows Falls, Vt., and is open Tuesday through Saturday, from 10 a.m. – 5 p.m.; Sunday, from 11 a.m. – 4 p.m., and the third Friday of every month, from 10 a.m. – 7 p.m. For more information, visit www.canalstreetartgallery.com, call 802-289-0104, or email artinfo@canalstreetartgallery.com.

"The Librarians" at Bellows Falls Opera House

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt. – The Rockingham Free Public Library and the Friends of the Rockingham Free Public Library, along with numerous other public libraries on both sides of the Connecticut River, have joined together to present a free screening of "The Librarians" at the Bellows Falls Opera House, on Thursday, Oct. 22, at 7 p.m.

This timely documentary, winner of the 2026 Emmy Award for Exceptional Merit in Documentary Filmmaking, follows librarians on the front lines of the growing movement to ban books and restrict access to information in public and school libraries.

This event will take place on Thursday, Oct. 22, at 7 p.m., at the Bellows Falls Opera House, 7 Village Square, Bellows Falls, Vt., and is free and open to the public. All are welcome.

Rupert Wates plus the Early Risers at Stage 33

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt. – Stage 33 Live welcomes the return of Rupert Wates on Sunday, Oct. 18, at 7 p.m. The Early Risers will open. Tickets can be purchased in advance at www.stage33live.com, or at the door as available; advance tickets guarantee entry. Only 40 tickets will be sold.

Though British by birth, Wates has been hailed as "a prime figure in American music." Since 2006, the London-born, Oxford-educated, award-winning songwriter has made his home between New York City and Colorado, performing throughout North America and Europe. He has released 12 acclaimed solo albums earning international airplay, and has received more than 50 songwriting awards. Dozens of recording artists have covered his songs on their albums.

While the doors to large venues and big festivals are open to him, he has a great fondness for intimate listening rooms where the focus is on connection and storytelling. He captivates audiences with his haunting, eclectic blend of acoustic, melodic art/folk infused with elements of jazz and cabaret.

The recognition that regular people are what make the world extraordinary is reflected in his vivid, sophisticated songwriting that by turns is vulnerable and bold, featuring intricate lyrics and memorable melodies, exceptional guitar skills, and his smooth, expressive voice.

Ashley Storrow and Putnam Smith joined forces as the Early Risers in 2015 and have since toured across the country, from Maine, to Texas, to California, to Vancouver, B.C., at notable venues such as Club Passim, Falcon Ridge Folk Festival, and the High Plains Public Radio concert series. Rootsy and lyric-driven, the Early Risers feature close vocal harmonies and arrangements on an array of instruments. Their debut album, "Making Life Sweet," went to No. 1 on the national Folk DJ Charts.

Singer-songwriter Myra Flynn in Claremont

CLAREMONT, N.H. – Singer-songwriter Myra Flynn will perform on Thursday, Oct. 22, from 6:30-8 p.m., at the Claremont Creative Center, 56 Opera House Square in Claremont, N.H., presented by the West Claremont Center for Music and the Arts. Tickets may be purchased on a sliding scale at www.wcc-ma.org/event/myra-flynn-6. Students are admitted free.

Flynn spends her career embracing dichotomy. Half Irish and half African American, her original indie/soul songs blend soulful vocals with a lyrical delivery that doesn't let one get too comfortable.

Flynn is a lyrical storyteller who uses her voice to empower, inspire, and even educate. She fearlessly tackles topics that others shy away from in both her music and in her journalism career. She says that motherhood has left her no more time to be self-conscious and there is no room for shyness. She finds a new strength, independence and inspiration in her daughter, Avalon, and her husband, Phil. Flynn is a singer, songwriter, journalist, advocate, ally, mother, wife, and always, unapologetically human.

Her podcast with Vermont Public Radio, titled "Homegoings," is a "righteous space for art and race." It's a show that invites listeners to be a fly on the wall, privy to candid and genuine conversations about race. It explores themes that fearlessly straddle the line between necessary and uncomfortable, as she speaks with artists, experts, and regular folks all over the country about their literal skin in the game of everyday life. "Homegoings" is storytelling with a heartbeat. No topic is off the table, and there's no such thing as going "too deep."

Currently, Flynn lives a bicostal life, still holding onto her roots in Vermont part of the year while also working and living in Los Angeles under the guidance of Swift Street Management Team. She has created a jewelry line made from recycled piano parts and recently partnered with Shelburne Vineyard in Vermont to create a namesake wine, Flynn.

Performances at Next Stage Arts

PUTNEY, Vt. – Next Stage Arts presents Tony Vacca and Fusion Nomads with special guest Massamba Diop on Saturday, Oct. 17, at 6 p.m., at Next Stage Arts, 15 Kimball Hill in Putney, Vt. Doors open at 5:15 p.m. The concert is part of Next Stage's Local & Global Performance Series.

Led by innovative percussionist and balafon player Tony Vacca, Fusion Nomads brings together musicians whose individual paths through jazz, global traditions, and improvisation create a richly textured, boundary-crossing sound. The ensemble features Jo Sallins on electric bass and percussion, Charles Langford on saxophone, and John Sheldon on harp-guitar.

Joining the group is Massamba Diop, a master of the Senegalese tama, or talking drum, and longtime member of Baaba Maal's internationally renowned band.

On Friday, Oct. 23, Next Stage Arts presents "Buddhadeva," a tender and searching solo performance by Akaina Ghosh, at 7:30 p.m., at Next Stage Arts. Doors open at 6:45 p.m.

In "Buddhadeva," Ghosh creates a love letter and a conjuring in conversation with the life and work of their great-grandfather, the prolific Bengali writer and poet Buddhadeva Bose. Set along the banks of the Ganga River, a place associated with death and rebirth, the work moves through poetry, music, memory, ritual, love, loss, and translation.

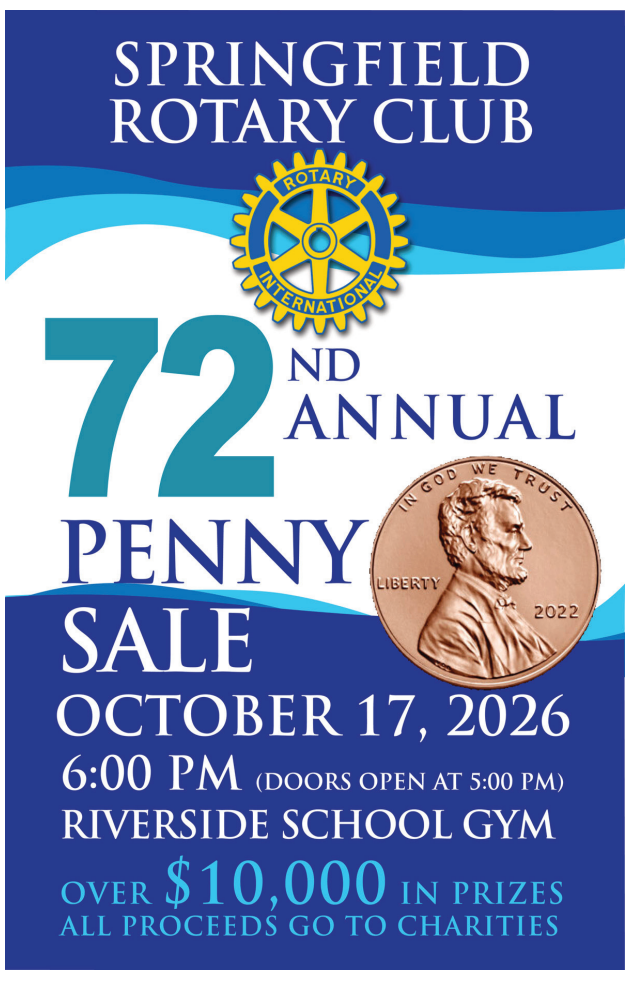

Ghosh, a nonbinary, second-generation American-Bengali artist, seeks connection with an ancestor they never knew through Bose's writings and poetry. The performance considers what can be recovered from a family history that survives in fragments, particularly when language itself becomes a distance to cross.

Tickets and more information are available at www.nextstagearts.org.

BRAT installs infiltration steps

SPRINGFIELD, Vt. – Since 1965, the Meeting Waters YMCA Lewis Day Camp, on Route 5 in Springfield, Vt., provides healthy outdoor adventures for children ages 5-13, including canoeing on the Black River. However, the camp had a problem: Its wooden staircase leading down to the river was aging, the footpath was steep and bare, and heavy rain would wash fine soils down the slope and into the river.

Early in 2026, after being contacted by the camp director the previous November, the Black River Action Team (BRAT) applied for a Vermont Enhancement Development, Design, and Implementation Block Grant (EDDIBG) through the Mount Ascutney Regional Commission. Through this funding, BRAT was able to contract with the NorthWoods Stewardship Center, which designed a set of infiltration steps that would replace the existing narrow and steep staircase.

Infiltration steps are open-bottomed steps that are dug into the slope, lined with erosion-control fabric, and backfilled with stone. This allows rainfall and snowmelt to permeate through the stones and into the hillside behind, rather than racing down the slope.

The project was completed by the NorthWoods crew in early September over the course of just four days, with assistance from the Black River Action Team. Each step is larger than the wooden slats on the old staircase, providing greater safety and stability for campers. A wooden handrail was added, and a gentler footpath was cleared of vegetation to further protect the river from any eroding sediment. The old footpath was covered with a layer of leaf 'duff' and branches to capture and slow rainfall, and to provide an opportunity for nearby ferns to colonize the area naturally.

Next year's campers will enjoy improved access to the river for safer adventures and more confident footing, and the Black River's banks will be less susceptible to erosion during storms.

State biologist to give talk at Cavendish Fletcher Library

PROCTORSVILLE, Vt. – Vermont offers some incredible online tools to help you learn more about your land and understand its ecological context. Figuring out how to use them can feel a bit overwhelming. Join the Cavendish Community and Conservation Association (CCCA) as it hosts Vermont Fish & Wildlife Department Conservation Planner Jens Hilke for an informative session on Wednesday, Oct. 21, at 6 p.m., at the Cavendish Fletcher Community Library, 473 Main Street in Proctorsville, Vt. Hilke will walk listeners step by step through the Vermont BioFinder mapping tool, which enables users to learn more about what's on their parcels and how they fit in with larger forest blocks and waterways. He will also offer a preview of upcoming changes to these tools so users can stay ahead and make the most of them in the coming years.

Hilke works for the Vermont Fish & Wildlife Department as a conservation planning biologist. He helps towns, regional planning commissions, and nongovernmental organizations with their conservation planning efforts. This includes help with GIS natural resource mapping, advice on prioritizing significant natural features, and help with implementing town conservation goals. Hilke did his undergraduate work at Connecticut College in environmental sociology, and then received a master's degree in botany from the University of Vermont as a field naturalist. Hilke has taught high school science in Vermont, New Hampshire, and New Jersey, and for a study-abroad program in Thailand.

home & business PROS TO KNOW

Maybe it's time to build your new home

REGION – You've toured the homes. You've scrolled through the listings. But everything seems to be missing something – the right location, enough space, the kitchen you want, a home office, more privacy, or simply a layout that actually works for the way you live. At some point, you may start wondering, "What if I built instead?"

Building a home isn't right for everyone, but if you aren't finding what you want in the existing housing market, it may be an option worth exploring.

Start with the home you want

One of the biggest advantages of building is the opportunity to create a home around your life instead of adapting your life to someone else's home. Maybe your family is growing and you need more bedrooms. Perhaps you work from home and want dedicated office space. You may already own land, want more outdoor space, or simply like the idea of moving into a brand-new home with fewer immediate repairs or renovations.

Building also gives you more say about the details, from the floor plan and finishes to the features that matter most to you. Of course, having more choices also means having more decisions to make. That's why understanding your budget early is so important.

You don't need to have a builder, blueprints, and every finish selected before you talk to a lender. In fact, financing can be a smart place to start. At PrimeLending, you can begin with a custom mortgage assessment based on your goals, budget, and current situation. From there, we'll help you understand what you may be able to afford and walk you through the construction financing options that could fit. That gives you a more realistic price range before you get too far into plans, land, or builder conversations.

Construction financing doesn't have to be complicated

A construction loan works differently from the mortgage you might use to purchase an existing home, because funds are typically provided throughout the building process rather than all at once.

Depending on your needs, your options could include a one-time close construction loan, which combines construction and permanent financing into one process, or a two-time close option, which allows you to refinance into a traditional mortgage after construction is complete.

You won't be navigating that process alone. A dedicated construction lending team can help keep the financing moving, including coordinating inspections and handling progress payments to your builder as construction moves forward. That leaves you more time to focus on the part you've probably been imagining: watching your new home take shape.

You don't need everything figured out

Maybe you already own land. Maybe you've found the perfect lot, but haven't selected a builder. Or maybe building is simply an idea you've started thinking about because nothing on the market feels quite right. That's enough to start a conversation.

You may also have more flexibility than you realize. Depending on your financial situation and financing strategy, you may not need to sell your current home before construction begins. If you already own land, the value you've built in that property may also factor into your financing options. The best first step is simply finding out what's possible.

If building has crossed your mind, even as a "someday" idea, let's talk. We'll start with your vision, look at the numbers, and help you understand what it could take to turn your plans into a place to call home.

You deserve a home customized to your needs. Why not start with financing that is, too?

Participants will work through key questions surrounding business readiness, valuation, timing, financing options, and ownership transition strategies. The workshop will explore a variety of succession pathways, with a focus on key employee or broad-based employee ownership conversion.

The afternoon transitions from 1-5 p.m. to a broader regional forum focused on employee-owned businesses, bringing together people from employee-owned companies, business owners, and advisors from across Vermont, southern New Hampshire, and western Massachusetts.

Sessions will explore topics including building ownership culture, open-book management and financial education, employee ownership committees, governance and cooperative leadership, leadership succession at employee owned businesses, practical tools for existing ESOPs and worker cooperatives, and roundtable discussions connecting business leaders and practitioners.

Springfield Dam Run recap —

PHOTO PROVIDED

SPRINGFIELD, Vt. – On Saturday, Sept. 12, the Edgar May Health & Recreation Center's revamped Springfield Dam Run saw more than 120 participants, spectators, and volunteers. With the event taking place all at the Springfield Dam, runners enjoyed running along the trail through greenery, taking in scenic views of Mount Ascutney. This year, the Dam Run also welcomed members of the Riverside Middle School cross-country team and their coaches, who joined in on the race.

Children under 12 participated in the free Kids' Half-Mile Fun Run sponsored by HB Energy Solutions, and each received a new Edgar May water bottle and an HB Energy slap bracelet as they crossed the finish line. All children under age 12 who participated in any of the races were entered into a raffle to win a youth mountain bike from Tygart Sports in Ludlow. This year's winner was Arminta Buck, age 7.

This year's new race, the Maniac Mile, sponsored by Mascoma Bank, invited runners to sprint across the finish line with $250 cash prizes for the top male and female finisher in the race. All participants received a Mascoma Bank Maniac Mile cooling towel. Elijah Bodanza, age 17, of Walpole, N.H., was the first to cross the finish line and the top male finisher with a time of 5:50.81. The top female finisher was Heidi Westover, of Walpole, N.H., with a time of 5:59.31.

Bodanza and Westover were also the top male and female finishers of the Springfield Dam Run 5K with times of 17:17.61 and 19:44.84 respectively. They each received a package of pork and beef from Vermont Raised Heritage Meats worth $250. All Dam Run 5K participants received an Edgar May collapsible backpack.

Top male and female finishers in their age groups each received a special Dam Run iron-on patch as recognition of their achievement. This year's top female runners were Eowyn McNaughton for ages 1-9, Nora Waters for ages 10-19, Malia Sinclair for ages 20-29, Stephanie Knockenhauer for ages 30-39, Wendy Doust-McNaughton for ages 40-49, and Susan White for ages 60-69. Top male finishers were Adler Gleeson for ages 10-19, Damir Babic for ages 30-39, Kevin Hollebeek for ages 40-49, Floyd Buck for ages 50-59, and Ken Walker for ages 70-79.

For the second year, the Dam Run event included a family fun zone with concessions by JC's Market & Deli, bananas and apples donated by Black River Produce, face painting with Mona Frye, and a mobile axe throwing unit provided by Keene Axe House.

The Springfield Dam Run was a huge success in large part due to its sponsors: Kids' Fun Run sponsor HB Energy Solutions; Maniac Mile sponsor Mascoma Bank; hydration sponsor Lamb & McNaughton PC; and community sponsors Belmont Septic Design, Claremont Savings Bank, Cota & Cota, Springfield Rotary Club, and VTel.

LUDLOW, Vt – Benson's Chevrolet is inviting local businesses and organizations to join in the Halloween fun at its annual trunk-or-treat on Saturday, Oct. 31, from 4-6 p.m. Come help fill the Benson's Chevrolet parking lot with decorated vehicles, creative trunks, lots of treats, and plenty of Halloween spirit.

Local businesses are invited to bring their business vehicles, decorate their trunks, dress up in their favorite Halloween theme, and bring treats for the kids. Whether the display is spooky, silly, creative, or downright spectacular, Benson's Chevrolet wants you to be part of the celebration.

Trunk-or-treat is a great way for local businesses to connect with families in the community while helping create a fun and safe Halloween experience for local children. So, gather your coworkers, grab your decorations, stock up on treats, and join in.
